Peters claims Carmel Valley Ranch has a 'vested right' to water supplies

By JOE LIVERNOIS

WILLIAM PETERS may have set off another Carmel Valley Ranch tempest last week when he tried to explain to the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association how Monterey County supervisors allocated water in Carmel Valley.

In the explanation, the Fifth District Monterey County supervisor told the association he believes the Carmel Valley Ranch development has a "vested right" to the water allocations it receives from the county because of a court case the county won in 1980.

Peters said he has proceeded with water allocation policy for the ranch on the basis of legal opinions given him by the Monterey County Counsel's Office. The supervisor said the county counsel's office interpreted an opinion voiced by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Nat Agliano in the Harry Holt case against the county to uphold a "vested right" to water for Carmel Valley Ranch.

'The commitment was not that unilateral,' Peters said. 'As far as the county is concerned, it is a clear-cut, black and white situation.'

"I have no comment on that," Jose Rafael Ramos, deputy county counsel, told the Pine Cone/Outlook this week.

"Peters has confused what Myron Etienne told him with what the county counsel told him," said Richard Rosenthal, the attorney who represented Holt in the lawsuit. Etienne is an attorney who represents Carmel Valley Ranch.

"My understanding is that the question of the Tularcitos aquifer and the interpretation of water conditions by the board of supervisors in 1979 was addressed by the court in the suit by Harry Holt," Peters told the Pine Cone/Outlook after the meeting. "That suit determined the board acted properly and legally in the interpretation of the specific plan" for Carmel Valley Ranch.

Peters told the CVPOA and the PineCone/Outlook that he has received legal opinions that the "vested right" to water for Carmel Valley Ranch and the board of supervisors actions to provide water to the development "were adjudicated in the Holt case."

The allocation of Monterey Peninsula Water Management District water by the board of supervisors last year was "the most restrictive implication for growth we've ever had on the Monterey Peninsula," Peters said.

Along the way, however, the water allocation became a boiling hot issue in the Carmel Valley area, especially when Carmel Valley Ranch developers asked the water management district for permission to annex part of their property to the California-American Water Co.

Ranch developers want to build a 100-unit resort lodge. Monterey County supervisors appropriated water for the lodge in a priority allocation system it devised last year.

But since the property on which the lodge is proposed is outside the Cal-Am service area, developers approached the water district for annexation to Cal-Am.

The water management district, after much heated debate, allowed the annexation. District directors said it was not their responsibility to act as land use planners. The water district simply provides water and directors should not determine who should get how much water, they argued.

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor William Peters (right) explained recent allocations of California-American Water Co. water by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors when he addressed the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association in the Carmel Middle School Library while Richard Dalsemer (left), association president, listened. Peters told the association he believes the Carmel Valley Ranch has a vested right to water. (Photo by Joe Livernois.)

The action angered some Carmel Valley residents, who said the water management district and the board of supervisors have allowed ranch developers to break a promise made six years ago.

At the time, the developers and Monterey County officials, including Peters, agreed that the developers should first seek to develop their own water supply from the as-yet-unproven water source below the ranch property which is known as the "Tularcitos aquifer."

Ranch critics say the developers never sufficiently tested the water source and depended on Cal-Am water because it would be cheaper.

CRITICS SAY RANCH developers broke their promise and should not have

DISCUSSION OF water rights for Carmel Valley Ranch (above) is not a dead issue, even after the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District annexed a portion of the ranch to the California-American Water Co. last month. The issue was resurrected last week after statements Supervisor William Peters made to the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. A total of 80 units already has been constructed, and 160 more units more have been approved. The development recently received approval for a use permit to construct a 100-unit resort lodge, despite protests that the so-called Tularcitos aquifer — which was to have supplied the lodge — has not been fully explored by the developer. 'New information' indeed!

Dear Editor:

Your front page article on the (March 10) issue of the Pine Cone/Outlook quotes Supervisor Peters to the effect that "new information" had been provided him by Mr. Wong and that the densities in Pebble Beach may indeed be too high, due to sewer capacity both in Pebble Beach and Carmel.

Indeed! Along with many other citizens, I appeared before the board of supervisors and the Coastal Commission not once, but many times and outlined the enclosed information (regarding sewage capacity and density) and much more.

Mr. Peters now claiming "new information" leaves me puzzled.

Dear Editor:

Sophie's Choice deserved more knowledgeable reviewing. Germany's desires to expel its Jews and the plans of the World Jewish Committee to re-populate Palestine with these non-Semitic Jews dovetailed. Accordingly, Germany's wealthiest Jewish banker, Warburg, brother of a Rockefeller Chase Bank partner, funded Hitler's rise to power.

Eichmann, also Jewish, was the transportation coordinator, as was Raoul Wallenberg of Sweden, another Jew, late in the way. The war industry labor camps were started when war blocked the emigration plans and England could no longer afford to betray the Arabs openly as it had since 1918.

The first questions the review failed to answer was why a Polish Catholic girl was interned unless she was a traitor? Throughout the occupied countries, the Zionist underground (supplied by our OSS) were considered traitors, as the native population had had their first taste of Zionist-Soviet inhumanity after World War I.

More tragic is the effect of the Holocaust hoax propaganda invented by Zionist President Chaim Weizmann in mid-1942 on the mental balance of a race made paranoid by milleniums of rabbi-taught hate propaganda. Either the hero was a victim of this upbringing, as so many are, or he saw through it to the basic humanity of the other races and had developed the self-hate common to his kind and took out his anguish on the girl. The reviewer left this greater question unmentioned.

At least this story is presented as a novel and not as fact, as were the Holocaust hoax and the Anne Frank Diary forgeries committed by her father for money.

'People do care'

Dear Editor:

My thanks to all the people who worked so diligently to help us during last week's power outage, water outage, and Boronda Road bridge washout. We were kept informed by the sheriff's office; we were grateful for emergency crews on both sides of the river — all of which was very reassuring. Indeed, people do care.

Residential care facilities

Dear Editor:

May I call your attention to the following facts in addition to your Thursday, March 3 article on The Carmel Foundation's pending residential care facility. First, it is designed to meet the needs of the low to moderate income Carmel resident members because many cannot meet the prevailing average rate of $1,500 a month in a residential care facility.

While admission policy has not yet been determined, it probably will follow the policies used for the existing 21 housing units owned by The Carmel Foundation since 1964. That housing policy includes the requirements that a person be 62 years of age or older, have lived in the Carmel area for at least three years, have been a member of The Carmel Foundation for at least one year, be ambulatory and have a low income.

It is important to remember that residential care facilities are for persons who can no longer care for themselves in their own homes, but do not require nursing care.

Thanks for firemen

Dear Editor:

We are very proud of our Carmel Fire Department — regulars and volunteers. During the recent wind and rain storm, I witnessed new evidence of the excellent well-trained organization Chief Bob Updike has maintained in our city and their splendid work in an emergency that occurred near my home.

A Monterey pine, three feet in diameter, crashed through the roof of the Jerry Werner home on Perry Newberry Street near Fifth. The rain was a deluge and coming through the destroyed roof more quickly than the neighbors were able to protect the contents of the rooms.

A distress call to the fire department brought immediate response and within five minutes, Bill Hill, Jim Kelsey, and other volunteers were on the scene with plastic sheets to cover the holes in the roof of the house and save the contents from major damage by the pouring rain. The neighbors worked valiantly to move furniture but it took the trained experience of the firemen to straighten out the mess of crashed rafters, plaster board and roofing.

We extend our grateful thanks to the Carmel Fire Department and its men. Like the TV characters in the insurance ad: "We're glad we met ya!" and to have you in Carmel.

A poem on weather

Dear Editor:

Our recent cycle of storms and wet weather prompts this poem, which you might like to share with your readers.

Oh the river keeps a rising so we cannot go to town,
And the wind blew so darn hard last night the dog-gone wires fell down,
Oh there's pot-holes coming in the road and water everywhere,
There's more rain in the forecast and my cupboard's nearly bare.
The neighbor's house is flooded its the third time round for that.
The only dry place on me is inside my old rain hat.
Well we've had a lot of weather and the Spring is not in sight,
Another storm cloud gathers and the sky's as black as night.
So I guess I'll light my candle, and huddle round my fire,
To wait for brother Sun to come, and make these storms retire.

Disarm space frontiers

Dear Editor:

As the "cold" spacewar heats up, we're increasingly bombarded by higher doses of radiation from orbiting spacecraft. Superpowers have launched over 2,000 satellites, many of them radioactive.

We only learn about nuclear dangers overhead when one of those lethal satellites goes out of whack and comes tumbling down spewing out radioactivity at us. This silent, invisible bombardment from spaceborne nuclear satellites fouls the human nest, makes everyone a biological target and threatens humanity's existence.

Once, when endless warfare endangered civilization, the Greek playwright Aristophanes exposed the madness of war. In his comic play Lysistrata, he depicted the Greek women seizing the high ground, the Acropolis, in order to save civilization. They held it until their "male" warriors demobilized and peace triumphed.

It's high time again for today's women to heed the sage's advice to make peace their profession. The stage is set for autonomous women to take the initiative and turn off the flames of war. The tides of history will only change when women side with fair and honest peace and totally disarm the wide-open frontiers of space.

Why wasn't information on sewage capacity considered by supervisors?

By ROBERT MISKIMON

SOMETHING IS ROTTEN in county government.

We now learn that county supervisors have quietly started to reconsider development densities permitted in the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program, after having turned a deaf ear to citizen protests over the very same point for years.

Why the sudden turnaround? Supervisors have been informed by Director of Environmental Health Walter Wong that the Carmel Sanitary District — which provides sanitary treatment and disposal services to Pebble Beach — can handle practically no new development in Del Monte Forest except on 341 lots of record.

This means, according to Wong, that the projected development density of 1,146 additional residential units in the Forest, plus a 270-unit hotel at Spanish Bay, and 80 condominium units, simply could not be accommodated by existing or even expanded sanitary facilities.

The rated treatment capacity of the Carmel Sanitary District plant is 2.4 million gallons of effluent per day — just about enough to handle the 341 lots of record in Del Monte Forest, according to the county's top environmental official. That capacity would have to be doubled to about 4 million gallons per day to handle the level of development contemplated in the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program, according to sanitary district officials.

A proposed $5 million plant improvement project would not increase treatment capacity by a single gallon, according to manager Michael Zambory. And a proposed water reclamation project also would not increase treatment capacity.

But the most astounding part of this whole twisted story is that none of this information is new, and certainly should have come as no surprise to county supervisors who are paid full-time salaries to be fully cognizant of planning and land use issues.

And yet, under the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program drafted by Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley and Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore of Del Rey Oaks, land development far in excess of supporting services would be allowed Development density — along with public access and adequate environmental protection — has long been one of the most offensive aspects of the so-called "Peters/Moore plan" to conservationists and many residents of Del Monte Forest.

The Wong memo has rattled a few skeletons in the supervisors' closet. First District Supervisor Marc Del Piero of Salinas already has accused Supervisor Moore of withholding information from fellow supervisors when he presented density figures for inclusion in the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program as the Peters/Moore plan was in preparation.

Already, Supervisor Peters has met with local conservationists to discuss a possible reduction in development densities of 10 to 20 percent in the coastal plan, before it is returned to the Coastal Commission for final approval.

Supervisors — under steady attack by opponents of the Peters/Moore plan — slashed development densities in the Del Monte Forest from 1,500 units to 1,336, and then to 1,146 units before the document was forwarded to the Coastal Commission. Now, it looks as if the numbers will once again be reduced to reflect realistic levels of public utilities.

Why wasn't this information presented to the full board of supervisors at the time the initial coastal plan was drawn up by Supervisors Peters and Moore? What is the level of trust on the board of supervisors, when one member accuses another of withholding vital planning information? What are citizens to think of their elected county officials when this kind of slipshod planning takes place? Why didn't supervisors listen to citizens who tried to tell them for the last two years that sewage treatment capacity would not accommodate projected development in Del Monte Forest?

Is it really any wonder that more and more citizens are aware of, and are willing to discuss, the obvious shortcomings of county government and the level of representation afforded the majority of citizens?

New city administrator must deal with a full cauldron of dilemmas

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHEN NEW Carmel City Administrator Douglas Schmitz set up housekeeping Feb. 22, he immediately found a cauldron of city issues that has simmered on the back burner for a long time and a council hungry for action.

Schmitz hardly had a chance to unpack his nameplate when one of the worst storms in the history of Carmel demolished the beach, toppled trees and played havoc with the city's drainage system. (See related story, this issue.)

Meanwhile, life these past three weeks for the 31-year-old rookie city chief out of Bellevue, Wash. has been a whirlwind of meetings, introductions and adjustment.

Although he has tried to become versed in the myraid of city affairs, he has yet to scratch the surface on a variety of key issues, Schmitz told the Pine Cone/Outlook March 10.

Casually dressed in a checkered, open collar shirt and gray cords, Schmitz projects a casual, friendly "family" atmosphere that he hopes will become a trademark at city hall over the next few months.

"It's the most important thing I've had to work on," said Schmitz about the atmosphere on Monte Verde Street.

"I like an atmosphere that's informal, like a family more than just a working environment," he said.

Schmitz's style is in stark contrast with that of his predecessor, Douglas Peterson, who resigned as of Jan. 31 to travel and study.

Whereas Peterson preferred to load himself with most of the administrative duties, Schmitz plans to incorporate new policies that will get department heads more involved at the council level.

Department heads, such as Planning Director Robert Griggs and Public Works Supt. Wiliam Askew, will be directed to prepare supporting documentation for issues on the council agenda.

And when the council has questions, it will mostly be up to the specific department head to answer, under Schmitz' new direction.

"They're the ones who know best. Bob Griggs is responsible for planning. He knows planning from top to bottom in this town," he said. "I'm never going to have the detailed knowledge Bob Griggs has in planning. I'm going to get things done by involving my staff," Schmitz said.

"I'm not going to be the point on the pyramid from which everything has to come. I see it more as a hub with me in the center."

•

SCHMITZ KNOWS that the council expects action soon on many of the issues that have gathered dust on the city administrator's desk for a long time.

"I think what has happened in the past is a lag between when the council expected to get things done and when they got done," Schmitz said.

The list of city projects that will have to be faced ranges from the disposition of Piccadilly Park to senior citizen housing to adoption of a revised general plan.

The fate of Piccadilly Park was discussed by the council Tuesday night. (See related story, this issue.)

Schmitz admits he is still a rookie on most planning matters.

"I haven't begun to get into the planning issues. Planning is the next thing I have to delve into," he said.

The revised general plan is expected to be reviewed by the planning commission this spring, after a special committee has spent more than a year working with a consulting firm to update it in accord with state laws.

By summer the commission recommendations should be presented to the council with final adoption of the revised general plan scheduled for fall, Schmitz said.

Schmitz begged off commenting on issues such as the general plan, annexation and control of tourist-oriented businesses until he gets acquainted with planning.

However he did comment on the longstanding controversies over the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses, parking and second kitchens which he tackled as assistant city manager for Laguna Beach, Calif. and which also confront Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Whereas Peterson preferred to load himself with most of the administrative duties, Schmitz plans to incorporate new policies that will get department heads more involved at the council level.

The parking problem will never be solved, Schmitz believes.

"I don't think there's a solution to the parking problem. There are a lot of things the city could do to mitigate the problem, but I don't think there's a solution to all of our parking needs," he said.

Every coastal city has parking problems, Schmitz said.

"If God had wanted everybody to live at the beach, he would have made all of the states islands," he jested.

The proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses has been a growing concern among city officials.

The strongest official measure yet taken by the city is a 1981-enacted moratorium on expansed or new tourist-oriented businesses, such as restaurants, art galleries and gift shops.

The council will have to walk a fine line when it adopts limits on businesses, Schmitz believes.

•

"THE WHOLE question of what is a tourist-oriented business and what is a resident-oriented business has to be solved," he said. "For example, is a T-shirt shop a tourist-oriented business or an apparel store?

"How can you get out of the dilemma? I don't know. I don't have the answers partly because I haven't gone through the general plan proposal in depth yet."

Cooperation between the city, residents and business community is important, Schmitz believes.

"I think we need to find some projects that the city, residents and businesses can work on together for the mutual benefit of Carmel," he said.

Schmitz favors legalization of second kitchens, which will be reviewed as part of an April 5 council agenda item on rezoning residential areas.

"I think they ought to be permitted. It's a fact of life," Schmitz said of the housing units that are usually a detached garage with a refrigerator, sink and hotplate.

"They meet a housing need. As long as they are not disruptive to a neighborhood, they should be permitted," he said.

The Carmel Local Coastal Program recommends that the city legalize up to 550 of the units to help provide low and moderate income housing.

Provisions to legalize second kitchens are also included in a proposed residential rezoning document that the council will review April 5.

Most of his time has been spent meeting civic leaders, staff sessions and learning about the city's financial condition, Schmitz said.

"For what this council has wanted to do up to this point in time this year, they have been able to generate the revenues to do that particular item," he said.

But the city will have to be wary in this "new burst of ideas for programs" such as the library annex and recreation, Schmitz said.

"That is an additional draw on the city's available income. We either make cuts to implement the program or we find new revenue sources. But in this post-Prop. 13 era, finding new revenue sources is not as easy as it once was," he said.

A special recreation committee is expected to present a series of recommendations to the council this spring. Schmitz said he will meet with the committee to obtain a progress report.

Schmitz also met with architect Don Goodhue last week to review plans for the proposed library annex on the west side of Lincoln Street, between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

•

A FAIR funding formula for the library must also be developed, Schmitz said.

Schmitz opposes one proposal to grant a percentage increase to the library based on the percentage of increase in the city budget.

"I'm opposed to that because I can't make the same guarantee to other city departments. If the city budget goes up 10 percent, the library budget would go up 10 percent. I don't think that's fair," he said.

Schmitz suppports a plan to donate two city-owned Dolores Street lots for a senior citizens housing complex.

"That's the next one I want to get into. The council's really anxious to get that one going," he said.

A special committee has advertised for firms, such as the Carmel Foundation, to submit proposals for a complex. The committee, which consists of Councilman Frank Lloyd and former Mayor Barney Laiolo, is scheduled to report to the council in late spring.

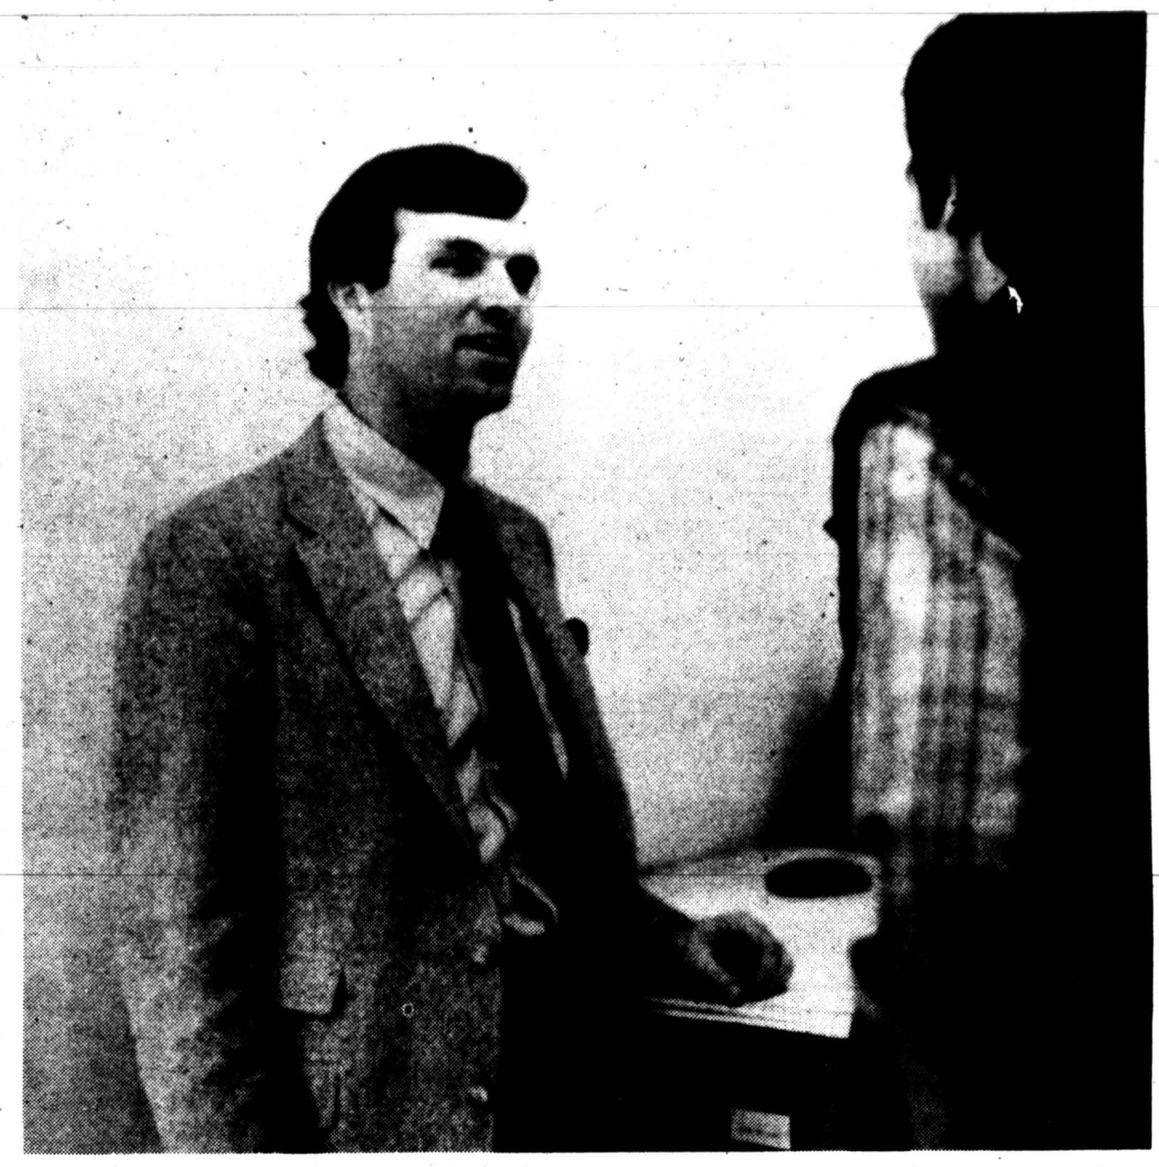
Sunset Center has an ally in Schmitz.

"I think Sunset Center is fantastic and Richard Tyler is a great director for the facility," he said.

The city must also determine the future of Flanders Estate, which is located inside Mission Trail Park.

Schmitz toured the mansion with Councilman David Maradei last weeek. Maradei, who heads a special committee on Flanders, has advertised for non-profit groups to submit proposals for use of the mansion.

That report is also scheduled to be presented to the council in late spring.



NEW CITY Administrator Douglas Schmitz chatted with Building Inspector Butch Maloney. Schmitz has spent most of his first three weeks at the city helm acquainting himself with the staff, civic leaders and budget.

Cal-Trans ready for environmental study on freeway

By JOE LIVERNOIS

CALIFORNIA Transportation Department officials are waiting for "the go-ahead" from the State Transportation Commission to begin an environmental assessment of the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Jerry Laumer, deputy district director of planning for Cal-Trans, said the department "normally does not start work on the environmental process until (a project) is on the STIP (state transportation improvement program)."

But in the case of Hatton Canyon, he said, he has told his department to be ready for an order from the transportation commission to begin the environmental assessment before it is placed on the five-year improvement program.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors last week voted 4-0 to reaffirm its support for the Hatton Canyon project and urged that Cal-Trans include the project in its 1983-84 improvement program.

Third District Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City abstained from the vote because he said the board item had not been adequately advertised.

The board also requested that Cal-Trans begin preparation of an environmental impact report for the project.

Jesus Garcia, regional director of Cal-Trans in San Luis Obispo, told the California Transportation Commission at its hearing in Carmel Feb. 25 that his department is "ready to initiate the environmental process if the CTC so directs."

Laumer told the Pine Cone/Outlook earlier this week that the commission can ask the department to begin an environmental assessment on any proposed project without placing the project on a STIP.

The environmental impact report could serve the commission as a document that provides additional information about the project before it decides whether or not the project should be built, Laumer said.

He added that "we have no direction at this time to move ahead on the project," though he said the transportation commission could request an EIR on the project as early as its next meeting. The commission meets again March 24 in Sacramento.

A spokeswoman for the commission said an agenda for the meeting has not yet been printed and she did not know if Hatton Canyon would be considered. Michael Evanhoe, commission director, could not be reached for comment.

Initiation of an EIR on the proposed Hatton Canyon project would move the project as close as the highway has ever been to completion since the state bought right-of-way for the project almost 25 years ago.

At last estimate, a highway through Hatton Canyon would cost about $17 million, though nothing more than tentative design schematics have ever been presented.

A transportation commission hearing on a proposal to rescind the right-of-way through Hatton Canyon was held in Carmel Sunset Center in Carmel Feb. 25.

After about one-half hour of testimony, commission chairman Ivan Hinderaker told the crowd who appeared at the hearing it would be "unlikely" the commission would actually rescind the right-of-way.

Laumer said that since the commission is now "making a determination" on the recission issue, "it can say, 'let's go ahead with an environmental assessment.' We're waiting for a decision from them."

Carmel beach recovery to be slow

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE WOUNDS Carmel Beach suffered in the recent series of savage rainstorms may be slow to heal.

The storms — including another which struck last weekend — have practically demolished what was once known as one of the most beautiful two mile stretches of beach in the world.

Erosion has turned sloping banks into 20 foot cliffs, at least 16 trees have fallen, debris is strewn everywhere and most of the sand has been washed out with the tide.

Because long range forecasts predict even more rain for the area, Carmel city officials plan to do very little repair work at the beach until the storm season is over.

"Right now we're doing nothing and we probably won't do much until the stormy season passes and we get the federal monitors in there," City Administrator Douglas Schmitz told the Pine Cone/Outlook March 10. "I don't want to do anything until after the storms and the federal monitors come down."

'I think we should pull everything together and do a comprehensive program, instead of looking at walks there, beach banks here and sea walls there,' Schmitz said.

Monitors from the Federal Emergency Management Agency are scheduled to inspect the damage later this spring when the storms are over, Schmitz explained.

Federal officials already have inspected Carmel Beach as a preliminary measure to the city's application for a $195,000 disaster aid grant. The application is now under review.

If the grant is awarded, Schmitz is uncertain how long it will take for the federal dollars to be distributed.

"It could be from six to 24 months," he said.

ROCKS PILED up along the beach after a stairway at the foot of 10th Avenue collapsed in a late January storm. A second and more ferocious series of storms picked up where the first had left off and there are only two beach access stairways left.

The city will probably have to provide the "up front" money for a restoration program in addition to $65,000 required as the local share under terms of the disaster aid program, Schmitz explained.

The city should not adopt a "piecemeal" approach to repair of Carmel Beach, Schmitz believes.

"I think we should pull everything together and do a comprehensive program, instead of looking at walks there, beach banks here and sea walls there," Schmitz said.

The primary importance right now is to "do what we can to stabilize the beach bank and direct the storm runoff," he said.

Schmitz is in favor of a plan by City Forester Gregory D'Ambrosio to form a task force to study a complete beach rehabilitation program.

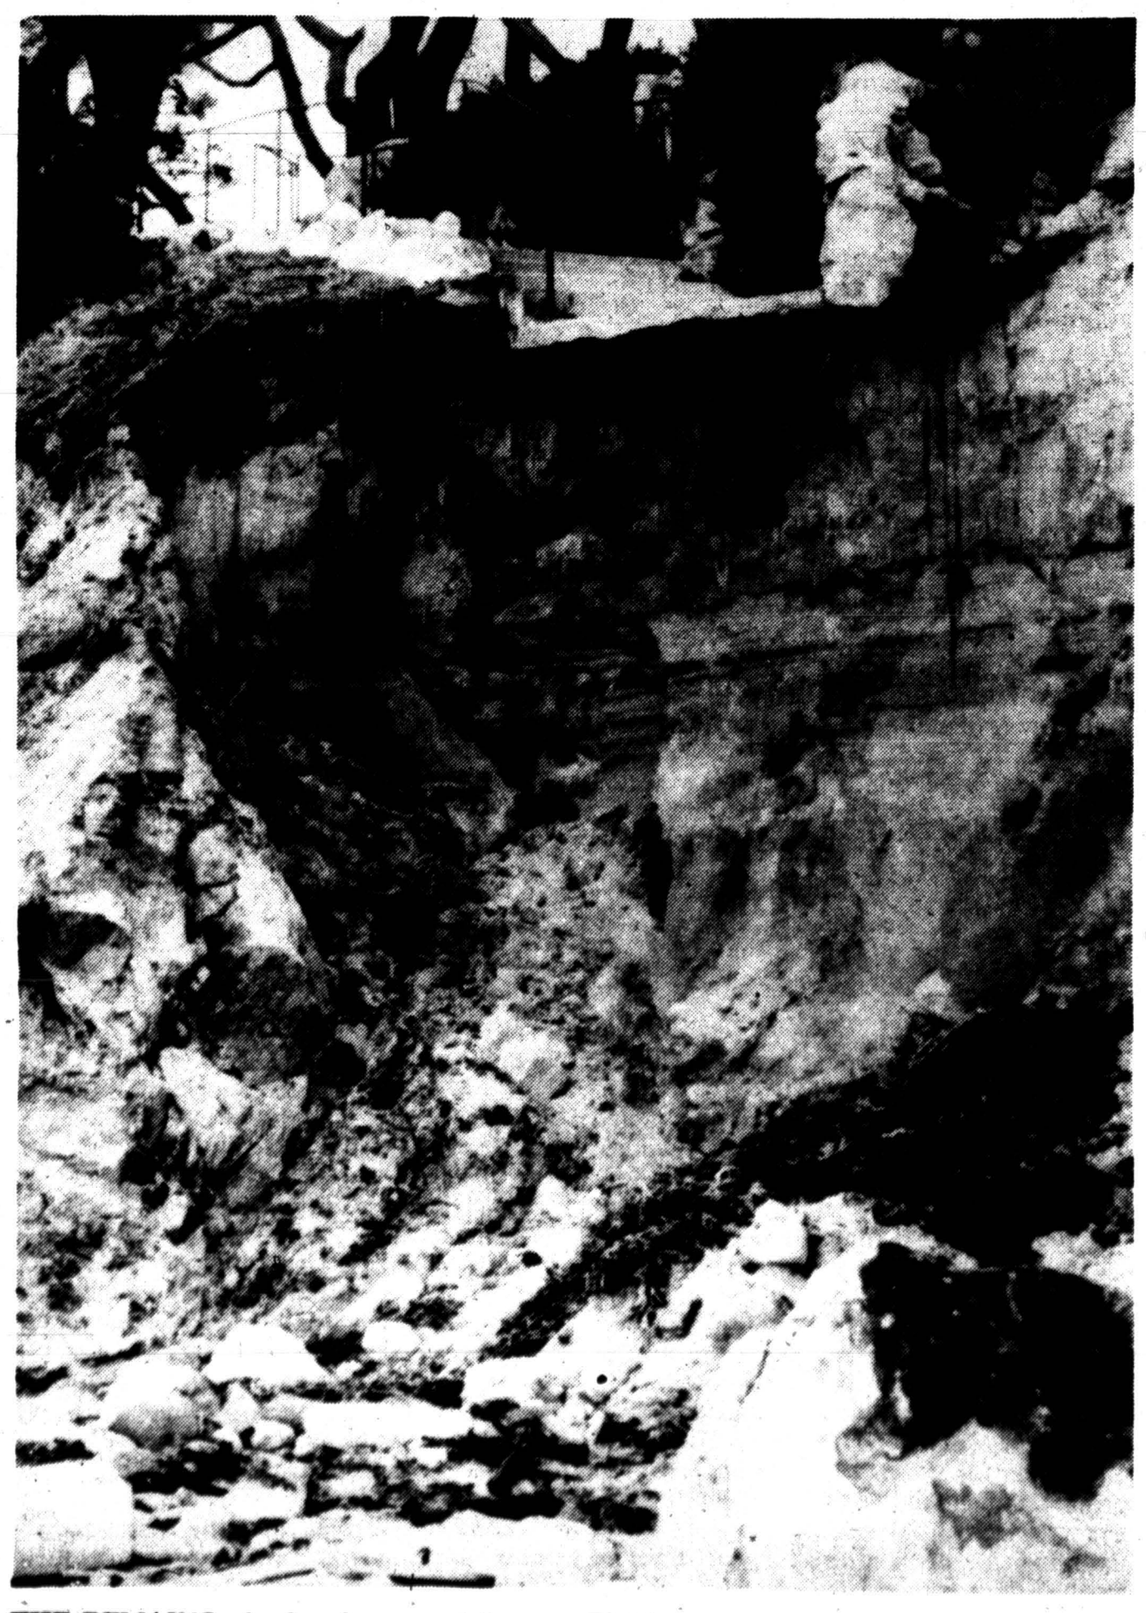
The group would consist of forestry and planning commissioners, council members, staff and residents, Schmitz said.

•

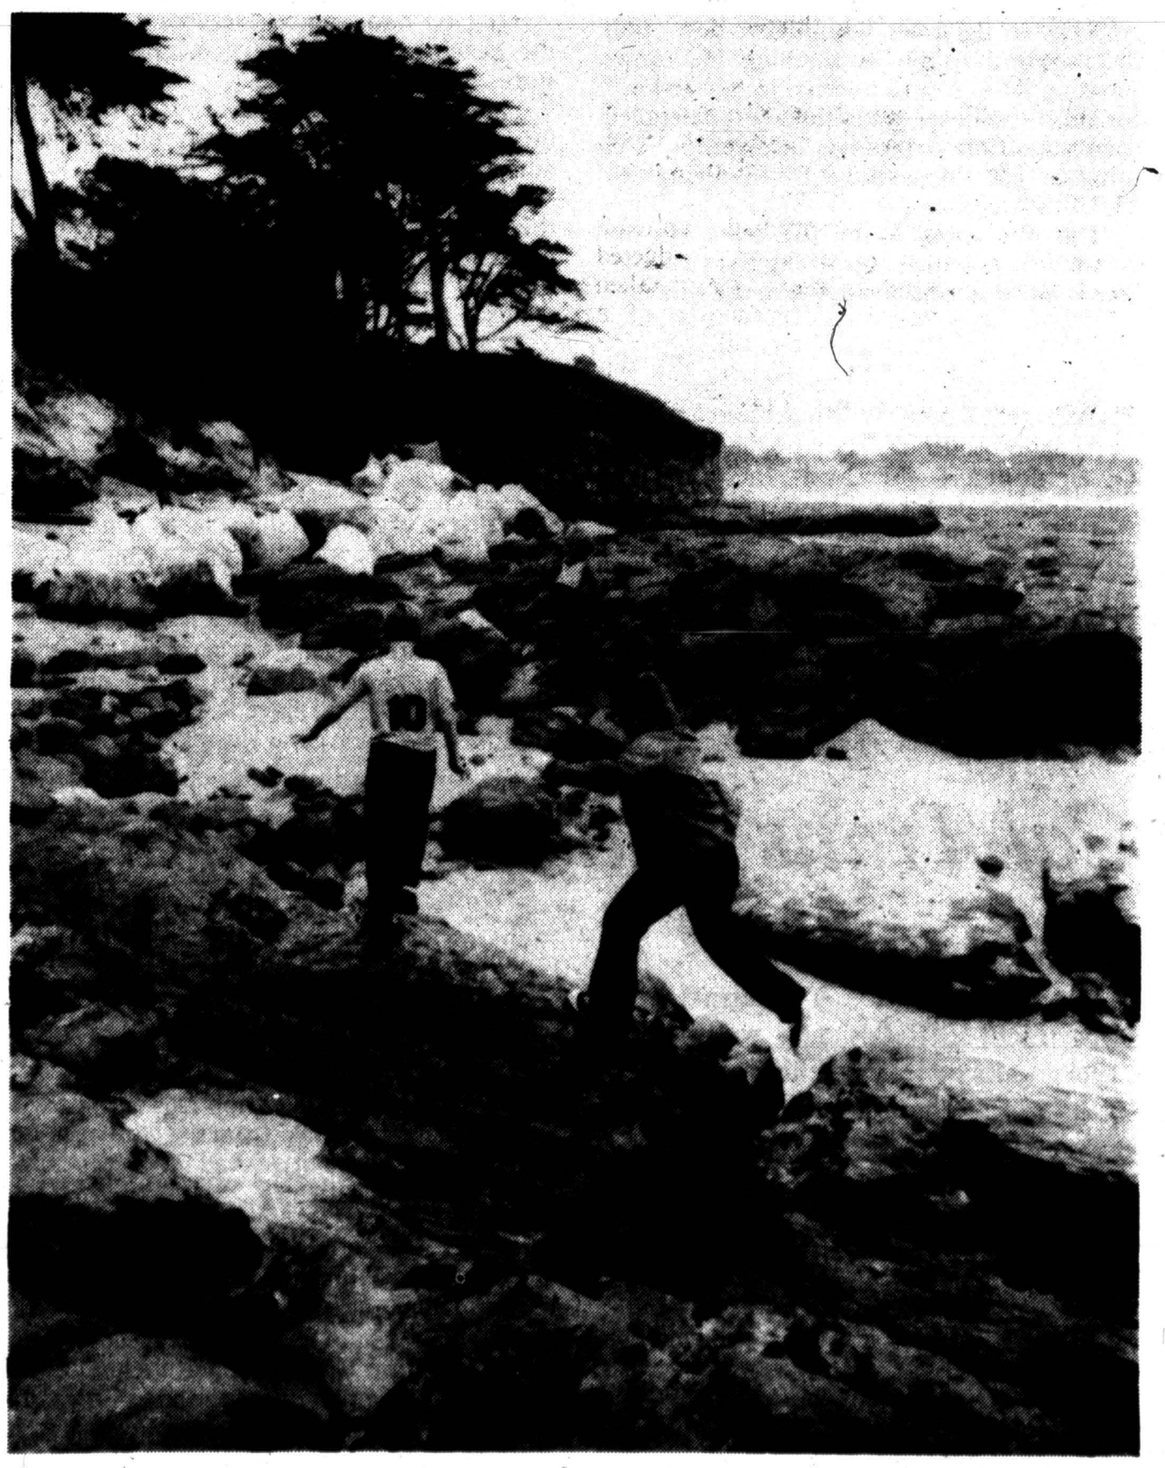
SCHMITZ SAID he plans to study the task force plan and probably make a recommendation to the council in early April.

D'Ambrosio said a task force is probably necessary because "we're literally starting from scratch down there.

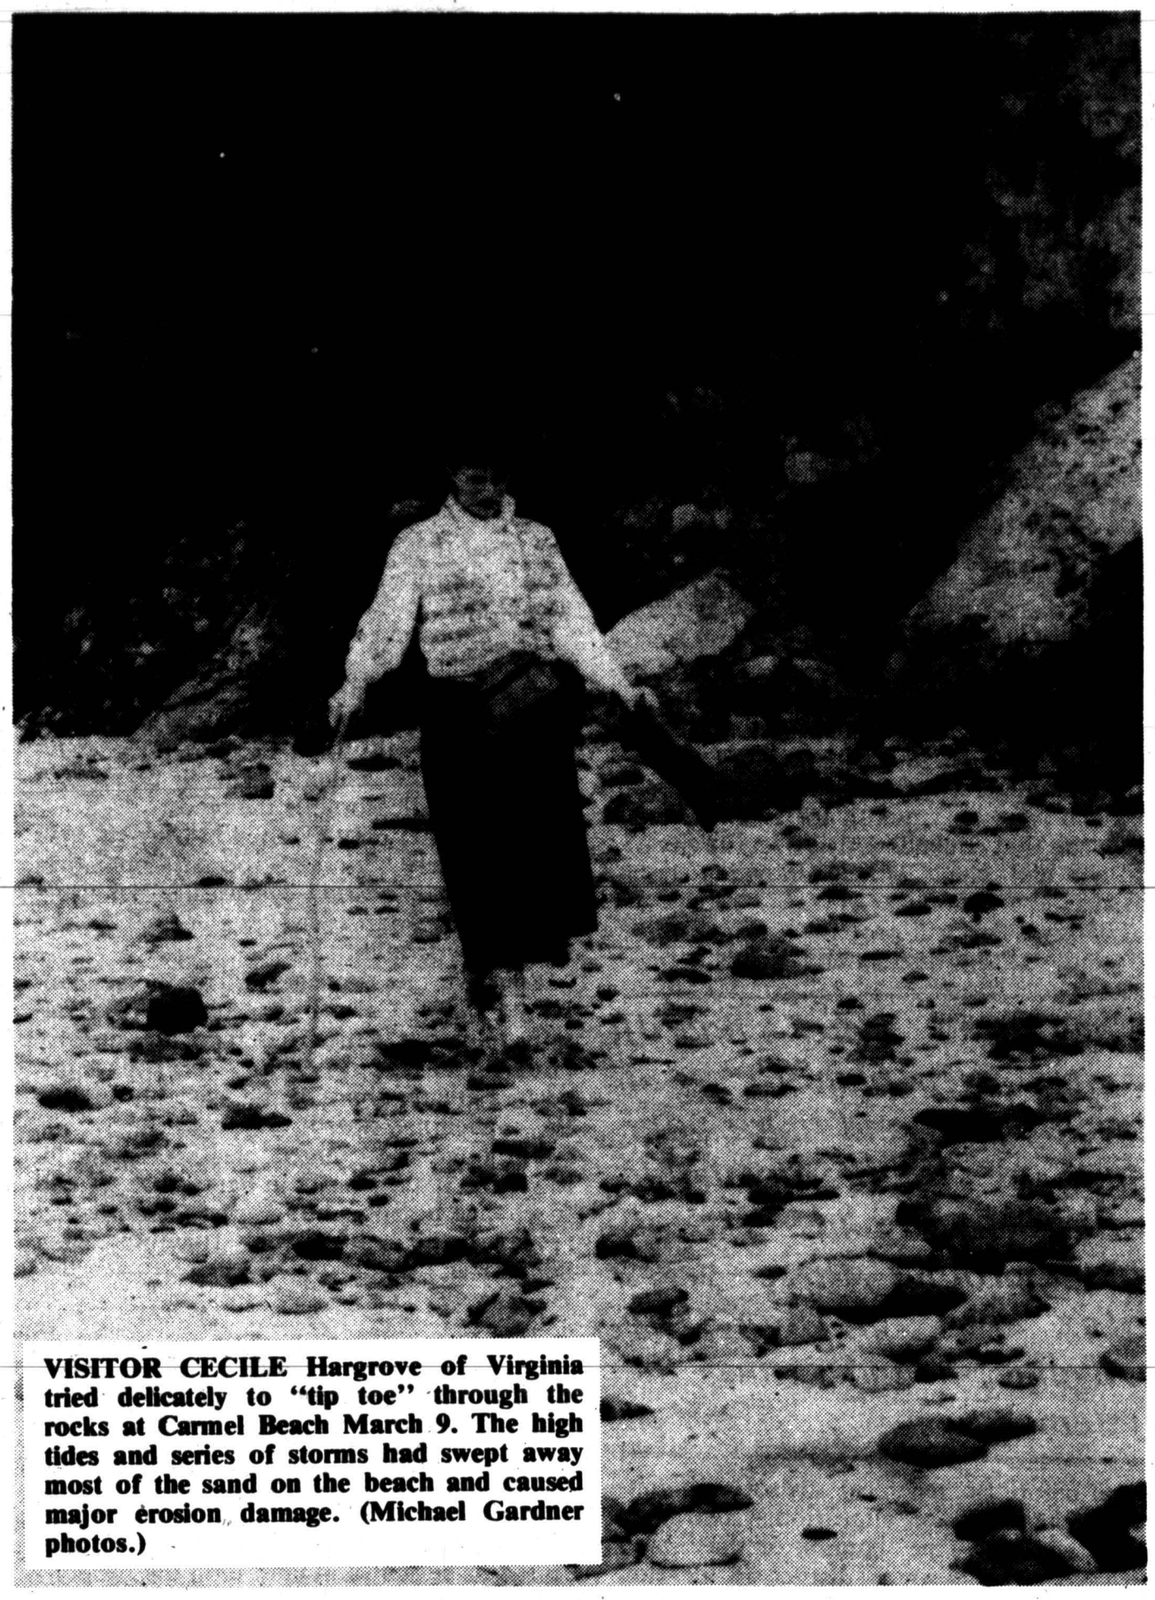
"What am I going to do about it? Nature will answer that, not me. This is a brand new experience. We don't know what will happen," said D'Ambrosio, who added that the storms are the worst he has seen in 11 years as



THE REMAINS of a beach access stairway crumbled on the beach. The stairway near Eighth Avenue was demolished by the storms and high tide.



A TRIO of young boys found Carmel Beach quite an adventure during a lull in the storms March 9. The major series of rain storms played havoc with the beach and banks. (Michael Gardner photos.)



VISITOR CECILE Hargrove of Virginia tried delicately to "tip toe" through the rocks at Carmel Beach March 9. The high tides and series of storms had swept away most of the sand on the beach and caused major erosion damage. (Michael Gardner photos.)

Carmel City Forester.

D'Ambrosio would like to have his crews clear fallen trees away from the beach, but the access ramp for the loader has been washed away by the storms.

"I don't know if we can even get it down there," he said.

Public Works Supt. William Askew, who oversees the forestry, streets and maintenance divisions, praised the crews from all departments.

"There's not a whole lot we can do right now. We're trying to hold things together until it drys up so we can get in there and put things back together again," Askew said.

"We're all working together. Whenever someone needs a backup, someone is there. The entire crew is doing one heck of a job," he added.

Before the storms, the city had planned a beach erosion control program, budgeted funds for a new access stairway and taken tentative steps toward construction of a beach walkway along Scenic Road.

Councilman David Maradei, who has been active in the proposed beach programs, said it is time to start anew.

"We're going to have to rethink the whole beach problem," said Maredei. "We'll have to wait until the storms are over and then go to work."

Meanwhile, state Senator Henry Mello (D-17th) has introduced a beach and shoreline restoration bill that would allow the Coastal Conservancy to award grants for rebuilding projects.

Funds for the program would be allocated from a special budget established by the 1980 State Parklands Act Bond.

"The time has definitely arrived for everyone to take a serious look at the future of California beaches," Mello said in a March 3 press release.

"This bill will open discussions among all levels of government and concerned citizens regarding the most efficient and economical ways to assure that our shoreline is maintained."

The bill is now in policy committee and will probably not make its way to the Senate floor for a vote "for two to three months," said Mello's aide, Larry Sheingold.

Sheingold is optimistic that it will pass. "The chances are decent. I kind of think it will. There isn't opposition," he said.

Sheingold would not predict whether any of the funds will eventually help Carmel.

But to ensure that the legislation is approved, Sheingold recommended that local citizens support the bill in writing to Mello and other legislators.

Mello's local mailing address is 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, Calif. 93940.

CARMEL BEACH was more an obstacle course than a peaceful path along two miles of white sand in the wake of the latest series of storms. Above, a visitor maneuvered though the rocks in an attempt to pass by a sea wall at the foot of 10th Avenue. (Michael Gardner photos.)

DISPITE THE recent torrential rains, the supply of water is still uppermost in the minds of a committee of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors. Carmel to struggle with other cities for water supplies

By MICHAEL GARDNER

TOO MUCH WATER, rather than too little, has been uppermost in the minds of most residents of the storm-battered Carmel area.

But there are several developments underway that may determine future Carmel water supplies for the next two decades.

A committee of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors will meet next month to review several proposals that could directly affect the city of Carmel and the Carmel Unified School District.

The issue that will probably most directly affect the school district and city is a proposal before the technical advisory committee to alter the water allocation system.

'They (the water board) want you to plan for your development and tailor your land use to the available water,' Buel said. 'If you come around three years later and change the ballgame, it undermines the system.'

In addition, the committee has been directed by the water district to develop recommendations on a policy to govern water transfers when an undeveloped parcel of land — such as Mission Ranch Resort cattle grazing property — is annexed to the city.

How to allocate future water supplies for the planned expansion of the Presidio of Monterey and the Monterey airport may also mean less water for Carmel and the school district.

Both the city of Carmel and the school district have expressed an interest in convincing the water district that it is time to readjust the 1979 allocation plan.

Under the plan, the city is entitled to 1,109 ac. ft. of the 20,000 ac. ft. annual supply of the California-American Water Co. There are 325,851 gallons of water in an acre foot.

The allocation system is based on water use for the year 1979 coupled with a demand projection by the water management district to the year 2000. The demand projection was prepared by consultant Richard Recht, who used city and county general plans and economic indicators for his report.

The Carmel City Council in May of 1982 began to cry "unfair" because members believe the allocation system has penalized cities that conserved water after the mid-1970s drought.

Since Carmel residents and businesses conserved water, Carmel water use in 1979 was unusually low. Cities that failed to conserve had a high usage in 1979 and were thus entitled to a greater share of the available supply, the council has stated.

Although the council plea was made in May, the water district in September refused to change its allocation system. The district reviews the allocation formula each September.

•

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education in November 1982 also called for revisions in the water allocations.

Trustees fear the school district may be unable to sell three surplus properties in Carmel Valley without a greater water allocation. Two of the three parcels have since been leased as agricultural land until the property can be sold.

Under the water allocation system, the surplus sites were practically "unsaleable" because they are on a low priority for future water supply, board President Ken White said in a November meeting with Supervisors William Peters and Barbara Shipnuck.

The water district has estimated that only those undeveloped properties given priority one through four will be able to obtain water

CHS students compete for bank awards

Three Carmel High School students have been selected to compete in the Bank of America Achievement Awards program zone finals.

The top-ranking students and their fields of study are: Kendra Sikes, science and math; Jerry Hu, liberal arts; and Tara Speiser, applied and fine arts.

The seniors will receive a plaque and will compete in a March 31 competition with students from neighboring schools. The competition will be based on written compositions, group discussions, scholarship, and civic and school activities.

First place winners in this zone event will advance to the regional finals to be held at a later date.

In addition, 12 other Carmel High School seniors received certificates of merit in the program.

The students and their fields are: Darcy Russak, art; Jennifer Banks, music; Cheryl Allaire, English; Maria Marchi, foreign language; Sam Salerno, social studies; Sean Mullen, laboratory science; by the year 2020. The school sites are assigned fifth and sixth priority by the water district.

Susan Wilson, math; Gail Russell, agriculture; Jennifer Liptac, business; Lisa Husby, home economics, Tobias Schultze, trades and industrial arts; and Ken Lutes, computer studies.

"We feel we should be as high a priority as a hotel. We should be as good as they are," Trustee Doyle Clayton told the supervisors. "We're not taking our money to Kansas City and saying 'bye.' We're staying right here. The people own this property and it's their kids who are going to suffer."

Trustees were hampered by the fact that they did not approach the water district in September for a change in the allocation formula. The school district does not have a representative on the water committee.

Under guidelines established by the water management district, the allocation formula is not expected to be revised unless there are drastic changes in water supply or development, water district manager Bruce Buel told the Pine Cone/Outlook March 3.

A revised forecast by consultant Richard Recht released in December indicates development in the Cal-Am service area has slowed because of the economy and high interest rates.

The question posed to the technical advisory committee of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is whether the new forecast necessitates a change in the allocation system, Buel said. The manager sits as non-voting chairman of the committee.

Buel believes the water allocation system should not be altered.

"They (the water board) want you to plan for your development and tailor your land use to the available water," Buel said. "If you come around three years later and change the ballgame, it undermines the system."

The district would also "penalize" cities that conserve water if it changes the allocation system for those areas that need additional supplies, he said.

•

JOHN LOGAN, a hydrologist and member of the Carmel Planning Commission who serves as Carmel representative to the technical advisory committee with Carmel Planning Director Robert Griggs, agrees with Buel.

"I think it's too early to change it. The purpose of the allocation system is a 20-year planning tool so we can adopt a fixed goal," Logan told the Pine Cone/Outlook March 3.

"We said we would only change under powerful circumstances. Is the new forecast one of those powerful circumstances? I'm not so sure. Right now, I'd be reluctant to change," Logan said.

But if the allocation is changed, Carmel will probably receive a greater water allocation.

In his December revised report, Recht indicated that Carmel will have an additional 80 multiple family units when the city legalizes second kitchens and granny houses.

If the water allocation formula is revised, those additional 80 units could mean an additional 60 ac. ft. of water annually, under figures prepared by Buel and given to the committee, Logan said.

The average residential family of four uses about one-fourth of an acre foot of water per year. (An acre foot is 325,851 gallons). If Carmel receives the larger allocation, it would provide water for an additional 240 residential units.

Carmel currently consumes about 94 percent of its allocation. New Cal-Am water figures are scheduled to be released later this month.

A policy recommendation to govern transfer of water allocations when an undeveloped parcel is annexed to a city may also have an effect on Carmel, Logan said.

The technical advisory committee has been directed to develop a recommended policy on the transfer of water allocation from Monterey County to the city of Monterey when the area known as "Tarpey Flats" is officially annexed.

The water district does have a policy governing water allocation transfers for developed areas proposed for annexation. That policy states that the transfer is determined by an average meter reading for the past two to three years, Logan said.

That precedent would have governed the water allocation transfer if the developed Carmel Woods area had been annexed to the city last year. The annexation attempt failed.

However, there isn't a policy for undeveloped areas, Logan pointed out.

A precedent will be set by whatever policy is formally adopted by the water district on the recommendation of the technical advisory committee and the policy advisory committee, Logan said.

•

THAT PRECEDENT would govern the water allocation transfer for the approximately 20-acre undeveloped Mission Ranch resort grazing land, which is proposed for annexation to Carmel with the Mission Ranch residential neighborhood.

A FEUD between the city of Monterey and Monterey County over the water allocation for the annexed undeveloped area known as Tarpey Flats will set a precedent for other unimproved lands proposed for annexation such as Mission Ranch (flooded above after a recent story). A committee of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors is scheduled next month to propose a policy on water allocation transfers for undeveloped land annexed to cities. (Michael Gardner photo).

"It (a precedent on Tarpey Flats) will be important for the rest of us in case of annexation," Logan said.

Buel said it is imperative that the water district adopt a policy on water allocation transfers for undeveloped land being annexed.

"There has to be some philosophy. You don't transfer water on a case-by-case basis. There has to be some rationale," Buel said.

The technical advisory committee will also review another issue that could affect the future water supply for Carmel.

Presidio of Monterey officials plan to expand the military base, but the city of Monterey is concerned that additions will drain water allocation reserves. The water supply for the Presidio is allocated out of the share given to the city of Monterey.

The allocation given to the city of Monterey also covers a portion of the municipal airport. Water for another portion of the airport is allocated out of the Seaside supply. Airport officials also plan to expand in the next few years, Logan said.

Monterey officials want the water district to adjust the allocation figures based on expansion plans for the Presidio and airport.

If district directors allocate additional water to Monterey, the supply for other cities will be even further limited, Logan explained.

"There would be less to go around in a smaller pot," he said.

The technical advisory committee recommendations on these water issues are scheduled to be reviewed by the policy advisory committee. Any changes must be made by the full water district board of directors.

The next technical advisory committee meeting is not scheduled until mid-April, Buel added.

Members of both committees are representatives for Monterey County and the cities of Carmel, Seaside, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Sand City, Del Rey Oaks and Salinas.

Federal grant approved

Sanitary district work could begin as early as October, officials say

By JOE LIVERNOIS

CONSTRUCTION work on $6.7 million worth of improvements to Carmel Sanitary District facilities could begin as early as October.

The district board of directors last week approved an Environmental Protection Agency contract that will provide 75 percent of the money needed for the improvement project, according to Michael Zambory, general manager.

Directors met in a special meeting March 11, soon after the revised contract was sent to the district office from EPA.

Still to be approved is an $833,000 grant from the state, Zambory said. Though the state grant is not expected to reach the Carmel district for approval for at least another month, Zambory said the district is moving ahead with the project because the state has already given "oral approval" of the contract.

Zambory said the most important part of the improvement project will be the construction of an influent pump station that will "preclude influent from being dumped in the Carmel River."

He said raw sewage has spilled into the river for an average of three hours every day for almost two months because the existing influent pump station does not have the capacity to handle incoming sewage mixed with the amount of water that comes through the station during the winter storms.

He said the influent pump station capacity will be upgraded to 8 million gallons a day.

In addition, the improvement project will include construction of another secondary clarifier, a chlorination/dechlorination facility, a dewatering building and dewatering press, standby power and telemetry systems and a new maintenance shop building, he said.

Zambory said the district has not yet determined how the local cost of the improvement project will affect customer bills. He said the state and federal government require an "updated revenue program" from the district that would include an estimate of increased consumer bills before construction of the project is 80 percent completed.

•

THE LOCAL SHARE of the project cost will be approximately $833,000, Zambory said. Of that, the Pebble Beach Community Services District will pay for one-third, or about $277,000, of the project.

The community services district contracts with the Carmel Sanitary District for one-third of the sewage plant capacity and is responsible for one-third of the costs of any improvement project on its treatment plant, Zambory said.

With approval of the EPA contract last week, the district established a schedule that will call for bids from prospective contractors by June 15, Zambory said.

Bids will be opened on Aug. 5 and the contract could be awarded by Sept. 15. Construction could thus begin as early as October, and Zambory said he expects work to be finished in a year.

The state already has promised the district its share of the grant but Zambory said "language was bad" in the grant that forced the need for amendments before the money is actually issued.

The improvement project was a part of a package sought by the sanitary district that included a reclamation project which would provide reclaimed water to area golf courses.

The EPA has delayed approval of the reclamation portion of the project, which forced the district to go ahead with the improvement portion of the project.

Zambory said approval of the reclamation project has been delayed because the "feds have asked the state to furnish more proof of the need for reclamation project."

EPA and state officials will meet today (March 17) to "discuss our reclamation project," Zambory said. "We expect something to come out of that."

Zambory said the most important part of the improvement project will be the construction of an influent pump station that will 'preclude influent from being dumped in the Carmel River.'

He said the reclamation project "is still very heavy in the mill" and his "gut feeling" is that "there is still a 50-50 chance of our getting it."

He said the improvement project will be designed to allow additional reclamation work if and when it is approved.

"When the plan was modified, the idea we had in mind was that we would definitely go ahead with the reclamation project," Zambory said.

The federal grant for the improvement portion of the project was approved in September and is good for nine months, Zambory said.

Rather than wait for approval from the federal government on the reclamation portion of the project, which might not have come until after the nine-month deadline on the improvement project, the district board of directors agreed it had better "split" the project and approve the improvement grants from the federal government now, he said.

The cost of the improvement program combined with the reclamation project would be about $18.4 million, Zambory said.

Look to the home, Carmel educator tells parents

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHAT'S WRONG with education today is directly related to what's wrong with the American family structure.

At least, that is the opinion of Carmel Middle School Principal Frank Lynch, who gave a two-hour presentation to a group of four parents March 9.

Lynch's talk was based on his observations — as a principal and parent of two children — on "Why Our Schools and Families are Failing."

"We as parents are constantly blaming the schools for all the ills when most of the problems actually begin at home," Lynch said. "I feel as a parent and educator that the answer to many of our problems is in the home, not in our schools."

'Nowadays, all they have to do is turn the switch on the they'll see things on TV that were probably before shown only at bachelorette and bachelor parties.'

CARMEL MIDDLE School Principal Frank Lynch believes that many problems in education today are directly related to problems within the American family structure. (M.G. photo.)

Lynch presented a 16-point comparison between the solid family structure of the 1930s and the home life today where nearly one out of two marriages winds up in divorce.

The comparison indicates that many social problems are caused by a changing society and it is up to the family — not the schools — to turn the trend around, the principal said.

In the 1930s, there was family interaction and a child had a niche in the structure, Lynch said.

"There was no TV and very limited radio. People just spent a great deal of time just talking to each other," Lynch said. "Today, there is more television, video games and radios. Families don't talk anymore."

Many families have also failed to provide moral guidance for the children.

"The kids got a great deal of training as a family at that time. People spent time talking about moral values: 'You don't drink, you don't use drugs, pre-marital sex is bad.'

"In the 1980s there is very little of that. One out of two families is divorced. The kids have very little guidance."

The extensive sophistication of children on such previously taboo topics as sex has also increased the moral dilemma faced by parents.

"What would I do if my daughter comes home 15 years from now and says, 'Dad, I'm going to have a baby'? I don't know what I would do," Lynch said.

Television is one of the major sources of information for children on the forbidden fruits of sex, drugs and alcohol, Lynch said.

"Nowadays, all they have to do is turn the switch on and they'll see things on TV that were probably before shown only at bachelorette and bachelor parties."

PARENTS, whether it is a one or two parent household, need to provide positive role models for their children.

"Everyone needs a role model and the closest role models are your parents. You need to set down the ground rules and stick to them," he said.

The schools should not be in the business of teaching morals, Lynch believes.

"The school can't do that. The teacher can't do that. Whose morals are we going to teach? My morals or your morals?" Lynch asked rhetorically.

Students today appear to be lost in the family structure as well as in society as a whole, Lynch believes.

In the 1930s, the family structure was such that every member had certain tasks imperative to the daily life of all members.

The rural farm is a perfect example. Many students of 50 years ago were forced to work in the family business. They were needed to help the father make a living, he said.

Today, there is little of the old sentiment that the kids should eventually take over the family business.

"We want more from our kids. We expect more. We want them to do better," Lynch said. "Besides, today not very many families are in their own business."

"Kids feel to a certain extent that they need to be important. Kids need to feel that they have some control in the family," he said.

"All kids need is some status. They need to know that they are important to the family."

Parents should not be afraid to be parents, Lynch pointed out.

"You need to tell them, if you do this, this will happen. I think we're all victimized by Dr. Spock with our concerns over psychological damage.

"I think we've created a monster. A loving parent could not create pyschological damage in their child," he said.

Peer pressure has also been a dominant factor in problems that face the students of today.

Parents need to set their feet down say no, whether it is a demand for designer jeans or a beer bust because "everyone else is doing it," Lynch said.

Lynch cited examples of parents of high school students who have been pressured into providing beer at parties so that their children will be popular, Lynch said.

"We bend, we allow it. We're all guilty, but we have to draw the line somewhere," he said.

Padre Parents make spring plans

By MARY POTT

The Padre Parents Board met at Carmel High School faculty lounge Thursday, March 8. Treasurer Donna Ataide reported on the current balance and urged parents of senior students to encourage their children to apply for the various scholarships that will be given by the Padre Parents.

Senior class representative Gail Salmonsen updated the board on plans for graduation. She also reported on the annual Run for Fun(d$) on April 10. Since the race will be held earlier this year, a community brunch is planned rather than a barbeque. The four classes will be selling food items.

Janie Barelli, sophomore class representative, reported that the sophomores are planning the annual Sadie Hawkins dance on March 26. Freshman class representative Susie Faia reported on the success of the recent dance at the Carmel Youth Center and told of plans for a forthcoming exercise class to be held there in the afternoons.

The agenda for the next School Site Council meeting was given by representative Jerian Crosby. It will include graduation requirements, WASC recommendations, campus beautification and Carmel High School concerns.

Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly announced that a school beautification project will be sponsored by the Junior class. Events in March will include a Parents Who Care workshop on March 30 and the eighth grade parents orientation on March 29 at 7:30.

Both of these will be held at the high school. On April 13 the Fine Arts department will present a program of music, drama and dance for the Carmel Foundation.

The next meeting will be at 3 p.m. April 12 at Carmel High School.

Carmel students win awards in twirling

Kathy Irwin, Cindy McQueen, Cindy Nishiguchi, and Stephanie Feekes from Carmel High and Middle Schools won awards in El Cerrito at a competition sponsored by the United States Twirling Association last Saturday.

The girls competed in team and individual categories. Kathy Irwin and Cindy McQueen's team placed second in the senior twirl team category and Stephanie Feekes and Cindy Nishiguchi's team placed first in the junior dance category. All four girls won individual awards for their twirling abilities with Cindy Nishiguichi awarded the high point winner for beginners of the entire competition. More than 350 California girls, ages five to 18 participated. The four Carmel girls are all members of the dance and twirl clubs, under the instruction of Pam Russell and Shay Davidson. Club director is Jennie England.

Valley services district a step to incorporation?

JOE LIVERNOIS

LOCAL CONTROL of several community services in Carmel Valley Village could be the upshot of a proposal to create an assessment district to finance the erection of street lights.

In fact, some Carmel Valley residents have said they would like the community to consider the formation of a community services district or, as Joe Hart of the Local Agency Formation Commission staff called it, "a junior city."

A community meeting designed to provide more information about the various proposed services that could be financed by either an assessment or community services district has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. March 22 in the Carmel Valley Youth Center.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters is scheduled to be on hand, as are representatives of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee, the youth center and Carmel Valley Little League.

He said the country service area is an 'initial step' that could 'lead to a more sophisticated formation. It could lead to a community services district, it could lead to a municipal advisory committee and it could lead to incorporation.'

Community leaders contacted by the Pine Cone/Outlook said the formation of such a quasi-political entity in the village could be a first step toward incorporation of Carmel Valley — an idea that is bandied about whenever the natives get restless with county officials.

But Richard Dalsemer, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, said he believes recent plans for the assessment district "could lead to something."

He said incorporation of Carmel Valley "has been on a lot of peoples' minds lately. The feeling usually comes when people believe Carmel Valley is not being represented by the (Monterey County) Board of Supervisors. There are a lot of people who feel that way right now."

He added, however, that he has "not heard anyone talking" about incorporation "in concrete terms."

THE VILLAGE in Carmel Valley (above) has been the target of recent efforts to create an assessment district that would fund several services to the community. Some community leaders say the efforts could be the first primitive steps toward home rule in the village. The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association has scheduled a community meeting designed to answer questions about the proposed county services area at 7:30 p.m. March 22 in the Carmel Valley Youth Center.

Carmel Valley residents are talking about the county services area in concrete terms, though.

The Local Agency Formation Commission has indefinitely postponed discussion of the formation of Community Services Area (CSA) 70. The Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee, a group of valley merchants, petitioned LAFCO to form the district to finance construction of street lights in the village.

The assessment district could also pay for projects such as pedestrian pathways, parking areas and additional security.

•

SINCE THE APPLICATION was first sent to LAFCO by the board of supervisors, both the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District and the Carmel Valley Little League have asked to be included in the assessment district.

The more services that could be provided by an entity, the more the community might be inclined to form a community services district, according to Hart, a staff analyst for LAFCO.

"Conceptually, it is often a good form of community organization," he said. "It would bring government closer to Carmel Valley."

Hart said a community services district is "often described as a 'junior city.' It's considered a step before incorporation, though incorporation doesn't necessarily follow it."

The essential difference between a county services area and a community services area is that a community services area is administered by a locally elected board of directors. County services areas are administered by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, Hart said.

The only example of a community services area locally, according to Hart, is the Pebble Beach Community Services District, which administers fire and sewage disposal in Del Monte Forest.

A community services district would have no control over land use planning, Hart said, and could not collect revenues from state taxes to finance projects.

Peter Coakley, spokesman for the village improvement committee, said the committee has not "considered the community services district seriously."

He said the county service area is an "initial step" that could "lead to a more sophisticated formation. It could lead to a community services district, it could lead to a municipal advisory committee and it could lead to incorporation.

"We're taking the first step and the feeling is we should take it one step at a time."

•

COAKLEY SAID that "if the CSA does well and proves itself in providing for the destiny of the community, then we can move on to the next step."

Dalsemer said the community services district "is on the back burner" right now. But then, so too is the county service area idea on the LAFCO back burner.

Hart told the Pine Cone/Outlook he does not expect the CSA to come before the commission again until "mid-summer."

The commission postponed a public hearing on the assessment district for at least 90 days in late January. Since then, however, LAFCO has been confronted with other issues from around the county that have a higher priority, Hart said. Specifically, the commission faces a deadline on its spheres of influence boundaries, he said, as well as annexation decisions that are tied to federal money.

The Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District has asked for inclusion of Carmel Valley community parks into any assessment district.

Gary Tate, manager of the regional park district, said the community park facilities in Carmel Valley village are leased to the community center board, which is responsible for activities and upkeep.

The board wishes to be included in the assessment district because it believes the parks should be supported by the community. The board has generated money to support park facilities in the past with various fund-raising efforts.

'If PG&E doesn't get it fixed by then, the project is sunk,' Coakley said. 'We could tell everyone that is not the way it will look but no one would believe us.'

Coakley said the village improvement committee supports the park district request. "We think it makes sense," he said. "We're sorry we didn't think of it ourselves."

He said members of the improvement committee believe the community parks district "deserves greater support from the community."

The Little League organization has also asked to be included because its baseball facilities are owned by the deDampierre family, which has committed the property as part of about 500 acres it is turning over to the park district.

The family has already conveyed about 50 percent of the title to the Trust for Public Lands, an intermediary organization, and when 100 percent of it is given, the property will belong to the regional parks system.

•

THE PARKS DEPARTMENT will then lease the baseball facilities to the Little

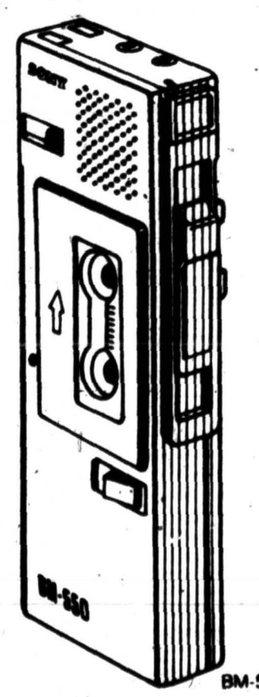
NO OTHER PORTABLE DICTATOR WORKS LIKE IT!



SONY.

Competition is tough on the way up, so to keep ahead, you have to outperform everyone else. It's the same way with office products—that's why Sony designed the new BM-550 microcassette portable dictator with so many outstanding features.

For example, its two-speed operation makes it easier to fit in every word, while its automatic recording level control makes sure you don't miss any words. Dual electronic indexing and digital counter save time locating documents later on. Sony even designed it to operate from 4 different power sources just to make sure it's ready to get down to business whenever and wherever you are. And, its handsome, durable metal case can stand up to those occasional hard knocks.

If you want to keep ahead of the competition, let us show you the pocket dictator that stands out from the competition—Sony's new BM-550.

Carmel detective credited with arrests of juveniles

By FLORENCE MASON

HAVING A full-time detective paid off for the Carmel Police Department last week with the arrest of four youths and the recovery of more than $6,000 in stolen property.

Detective Sgt. "Pete" Poitras, appointed last September, also credits a cooperative effort with Davis police for the arrests, which he believes have broken up a major Carmel burglary ring.

Sometimes working as much as 16 hours a day, Sergeant Poitras followed up leads and tracked down the members of the group responsible for a series of home and vehicle thefts — at least 12 cases to date, with perhaps more to come.

The unraveling of the case began when the youths — juveniles ages 16 and 17, and two 18-year-olds — took advantage of an elderly Carmel woman whom they knew. Thinking that she would not report them, they "stashed" a number of stolen items in her home.

A friend of the women who saw these items urged her to contact the Carmel Police Department. Poitras said because of the woman's nervousness about the situation, it was helpful that he could arrive at her home in an unmarked car and in plain clothes.

Sergeant Poitras recognized a home stereo, skiis and other items in the Carmel house as stolen propety. The question was, whose property, and who stole it?

"I ran it all through the computer," Poitras said, "and spent hours tracking everything down. The father of one of the young suspects was cooperative and I was able to look around that home and a shed. This led to the recovery of additional items, including some car seats taken in a vehicle burglary several weeks ago."

•

IN THE MEANTIME, the youths had fled the area in a stolen car. Tracking down that car meant more hard work for Sergeant Poitras. The trail ended in an apartment in Davis, rented by a friend of the suspects who is also a resident of Carmel and supposedly a student at Davis. The Davis police came on the scene at that point and several burglaries at the apartment complex were also solved.

The juveniles (brothers) were apprehended, and the 18-year-olds, Christopher Reed and Andre Naville, were also arrested on suspicion of burglary and possession of stolen property. According to Sergeant Poitras, a fifth arrest is imminent and the count will go to six eventually.

Police found that the youths had also stolen skiis from the slopes at ski resorts. Nine pairs of skiis have been recovered so far. Among the other stolen goods recovered was a $1,500 watch stolen in 1982. Sergeant Poitras pointed to the value of keeping records of valuables: the owner had the watch's serial number recorded and could prove this to be his property.

Also recovered was a coin collection taken in the burglary of a home on Upper Trail.

Apparently, parents of these youths were unaware of their activities over a long period of time. Some of the parents were cooperative, Sergeant Poitras said, while others put protection of their children first and were not immediately helpful in the investigation.

Sergeant Poitras' comment about the suspects: "These are not too nice kids."

CV assessment district plans

League organization. The organization hopes to attach itself to the assessment district so the entire community can share in the operations and maintenance of the facilities, Tate said.

Tate is also a Carmel Valley resident who said he would prefer the formation of a community services district because it would give villagers local control.

"I'm of the personal opinion that a CSD is a more desirable organization, something that would be run by local individuals," he said.

Meanwhile, Dalsemer said the county services area could be formed so that only residents in the village would pay for the street lights, while residents in the larger assessment district would pay for the community parks or any other service that would be of benefit.

The argument is, he said, that persons who live outside the village would not benefit from the 42 planned lights and should not pay for them.

But Coakley said he hopes to convince Carmel Valley residents outside the village that street lights "do not benefit just the business people" in the community.

Coakley said the improvement committee has erected a "sample" light standard to show the community the lights will not throw out an "ambient glow" that could detract from the character of the community or lessen the view of the universe at night.

By late last week, however, the sample had been incorrectly installed by Pacific Gas and Electric "and certainly does not serve as a good example," Coakley said. PG&E was summoned to re-erect the standard which should be ready for display by the end of this week, he said.

"If PG&E doesn't get it fixed by then, the project is sunk," Coakley said. "We could tell everyone that is not the way it will look but no one would believe us."

The light is located in Schwartz Memorial Park, adjacent to the Bank of America building in the village.

Big Sur residents remain resolute in the face of massive storm damage and begin recovery

By JOE LIVERNOIS

BIG SUR will recover from the winter storms that have shut off the forbidding coastline from the outside world for two weeks, its residents say.

Merchants in Big Sur optimistically promise business as usual in time for the traditionally busy summer. Residents ruefully say the storms may have chased away tourists — and some of their neighbors — for at least a year or two.

But everyone contacted by the Pine Cone/-Outlook last week said they believe "Big Sur will come back."

How soon it comes back depends on how fast the California Transportation Department is able to reconstruct Highway 1, which is commonly described as the "umbilical cord" to Big Sur.

Highway 1 is the only road through the rugged Big Sur coast area and about 2.5 million visitors, as well as the approximately 4,000 residents, traveled Highway 1 through Big Sur last year.

Cal-Trans officials report that about 30 different landslides have created myriad problems along Highway 1. The cumulative problems have forced Cal-Trans officials to shut down the highway to anyone but residents and emergency vehicles.

Since the storm damage closed the route, Highway 1 is opened long enough for a convoy of residents with business outside Big Sur to shuttle out early in the morning. It is reopened briefly in the early evening for the return trip.

"I feel like I'm in a work furlough camp," said Zad Leavy, a Big Sur attorney with an office in Carmel.

Leavy, a former Central Coast Regional Coastal Commission member, is among the Big Sur residents who believe the short-term effects of the storm and the landslides could devastate the area.

"It's grim," he told the Pine Cone/ Outlook. "Every business down there is hurting. And the road is a disaster. We're not going to have people down here for another year."

He said Big Sur "has come to a screeching halt" but added that he believes "Big Sur is going to come back.

"Big Sur is not a desirable place this week, that's all."

•

BUT THINGS AREN'T all that bad, Big Sur businessmen maintain.

They plan to reopen their businesses within two months and expect the roads to be ready by then, depending on the weather. They plan to be open in time to meet the summer rush.

Robert Bussinger, who operates Ventana Inn, said he and other merchants in the area are optimistic. In fact, he said he has not withdrawn his Coastal Commission permit application to add 19 units to the inn and expects to have his additions completed this time next year.

Bussinger said he laid off about 80 of his 110 employees. He added, however, that he is not accepting rent from his laid-off workers who live on the property. He has also given the employees food from the restaurant that would have spoiled otherwise.

Gary Koeppel, president of the Big Sur Chamber of Commerce, said merchants in the area "are primarily engaged in reorganizing their businesses and making the best of the situation."

He said about 90 percent of the 550 persons employed by the 30 Big Sur businesses are now laid off.

Meanwhile, the businessmen of Big Sur have reactivated the chamber of commerce to give them a unified voice in the critical months ahead.

The chamber of commerce is also responsible for "rumor control," Koeppel said.

Rumors that generate out of Big Sur after a catastrophe can devastate the tourist trade, Koeppel told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

During the Marble Cone fire in 1977, for instance, the San Francisco Chronicle printed a story with a headline that read "Big Sur closed indefinitely." The story said Big Sur State Park was closed indefinitely, though the highway and the businesses were not. "There's a big difference," said Koeppel.

Earlier this month, Big Sur merchants were disturbed by an Associated Press story to the effect that 800 people were trapped after a Big Sur avalanche.

'THESE ARE LANDSLIDES," Koeppel said, "not avalanches. Media hysteria is what we don't need right now. That is not to minimize the seriousness of our problem. It just doesn't need to be exaggerated."

No serious damage to most Big Sur businesses has been reported, Koeppel said. "But it is a strange feeling to walk through here alone," said Bussinger. "And economically, it's scarier yet."

Koeppel said Big Sur businessment will apply for medium-interest economic injury disaster loans provided by the Small Business Administration "to sustain operating expenses until business resumes."

"Business here has suffered very little, if any, physical injury," he said. "But there has been a serious economic reversal."

The longer Highway 1 remains closed, however, the more serious the economic reversal will be.

Koeppel said two-thirds of all the vehicles that typically travel through Big Sur move through the northbound lanes but that the worst of the landslides are further south of most of the Big Sur business.

He said Cal-Trans employees who have toiled to clear the southern portion of Highway 1 have been "working their legs off. They are unbelievable. They've been working every day since mid-January and putting in 12 to 14 hour days."

Ken Jones, manager of the California state parks system in Big Sur, said he is also confident tourists will pour into the five state parks in Big Sur this summer.

"We're really not unlike any other business in Big Sur," he said. "We hope that by Memorial Day we will have business as usual.

"We did sustain some damage to our facilities, but we will be prepared for visitors when the highway is opened."

He said reservations for overnight camping at Big Sur parks are not now being taken by the Ticketron system. When the highway reopens, the ticket agency will take reservations once again, he said.

•

WHILE BIG SUR residents dig out of the mess nature has created for them and while Big Sur residents anxiously wait for the highway to open, a cruel joke has circulated through the area. "Nature," they say, "is the ultimate Coastal Act."

On April 5, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors is scheduled once again to listen to Big Sur residents who have been discordantly divided on the nature of the Big Sur Local Coastal Program.

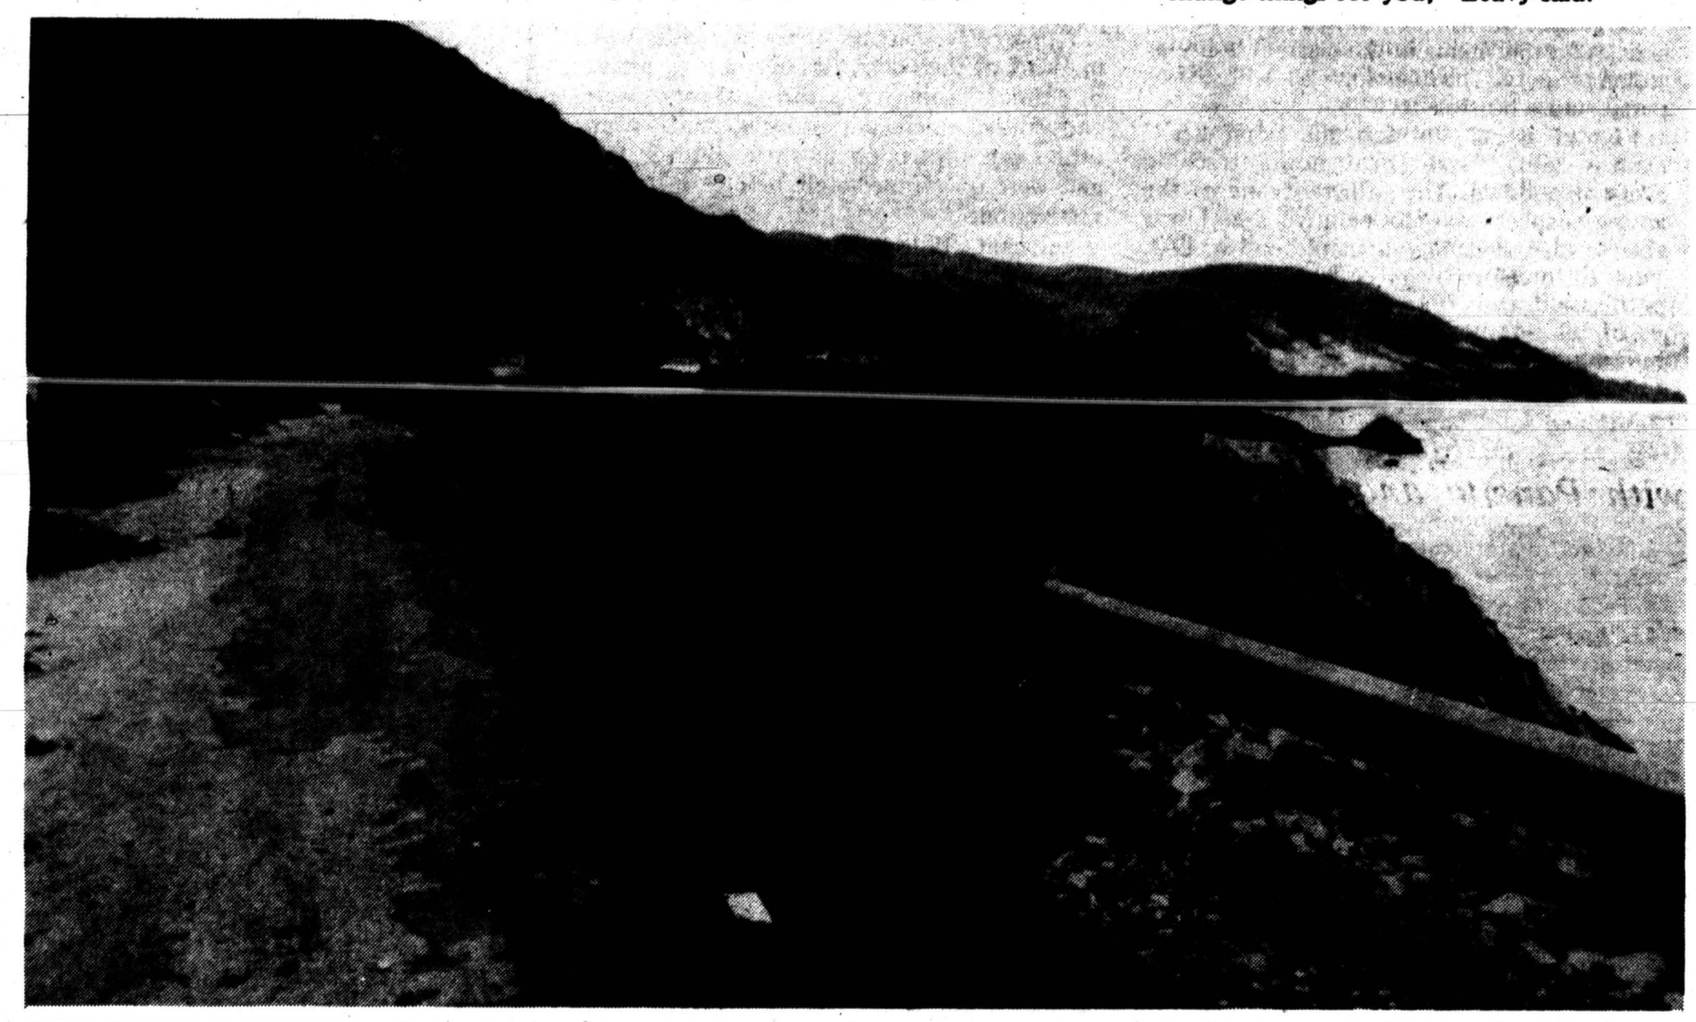
Specifically, the board is to deliberate further on the shape of a proposed transfer of density credit scheme which is designed to provide coastal conservation by permitting development rights to be sold and used in designated areas outside the scenic coastal corridor.

The coastal plan is designed to protect the beauty of the Big Sur coast, which the Coastal Commission considers a natural resource unto itself.

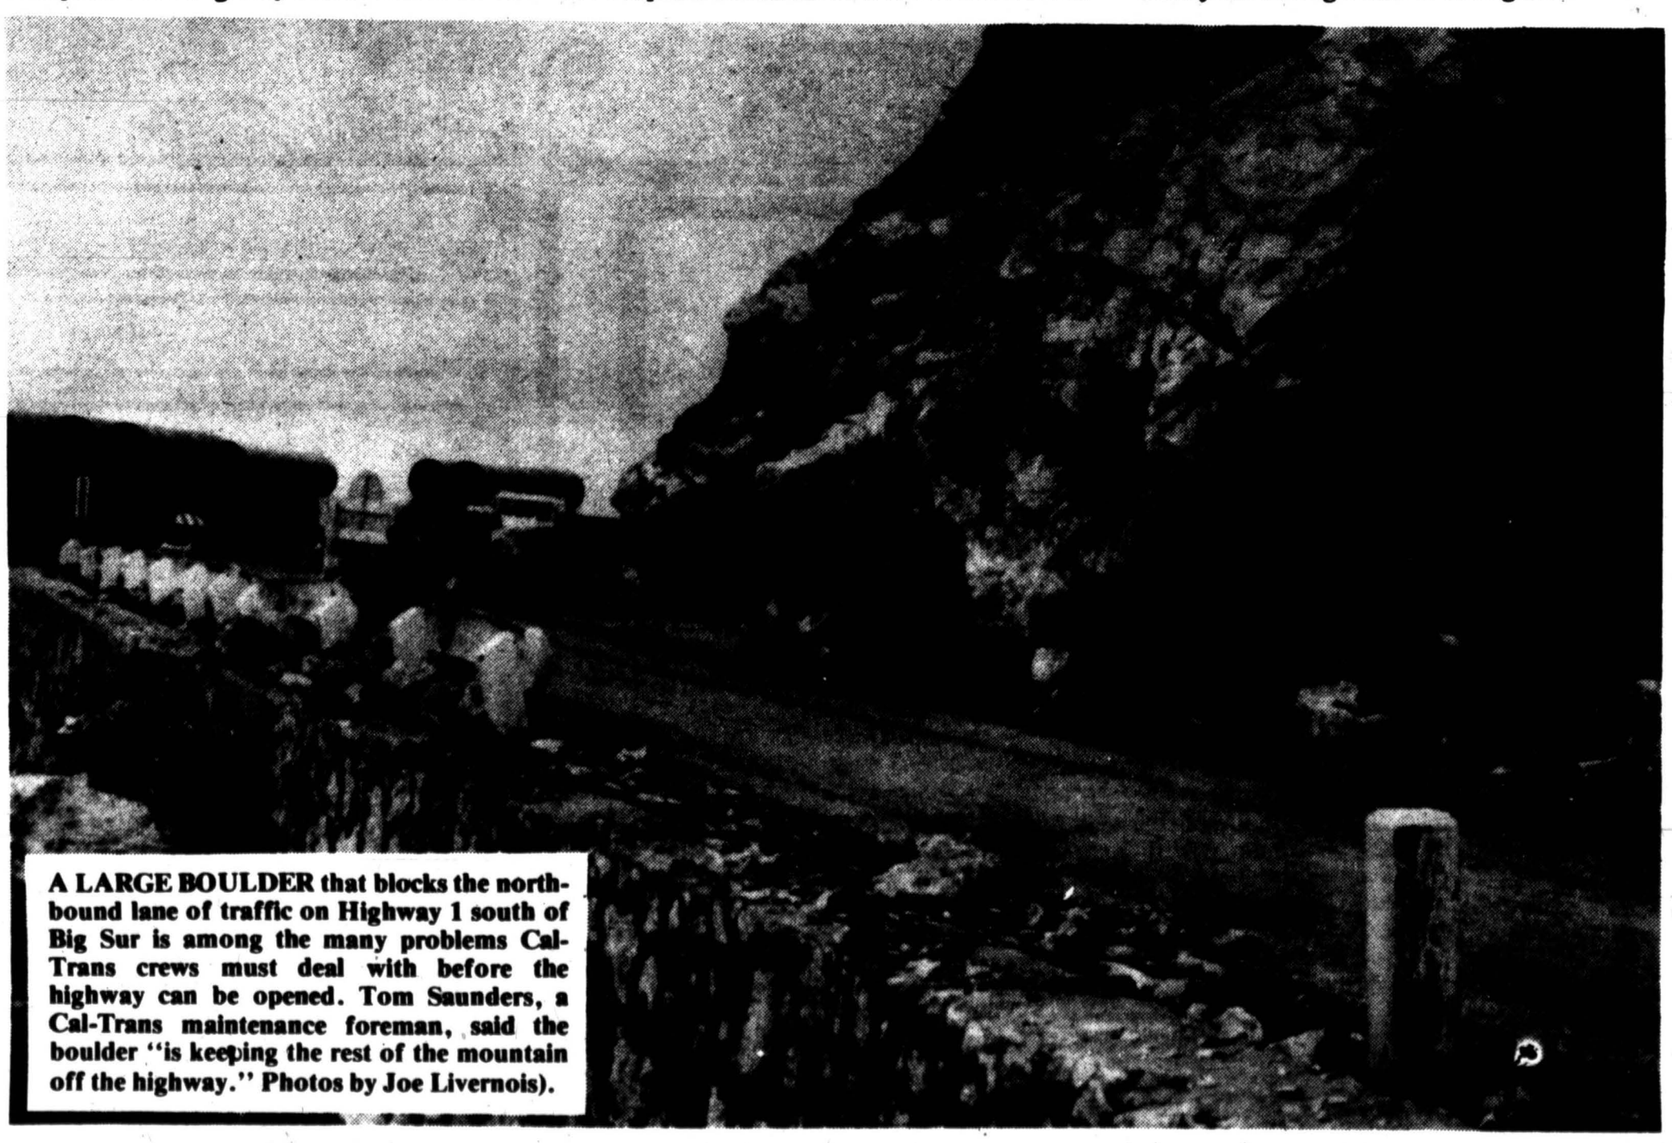
Some Big Sur residents believe the politicians and bureaucrats compromised nature too much when they put the plan together. Others believe the draft plan does not allow enough compromise.

But the storms of recent weeks indicated that nature allows no concessions, Leavy said.

"When you build on a road like Highway 1, sooner or later Mother Nature is going to change things for you," Leavy said.



CRUMBLING ASPHALT is all that is left of a portion of Highway 1 south of Point Sur after a landslide directly below the roadway sent asphalt hundreds of feet into the ocean. Destruction to the highway has halted practically all through traffic to Big Sur.



A LARGE BOULDER that blocks the northbound lane of traffic on Highway 1 south of Big Sur is among the many problems Cal-Trans crews must deal with before the highway can be opened. Tom Saunders, a Cal-Trans maintenance foreman, said the boulder "is keeping the rest of the mountain off the highway." Photos by Joe Livernois).

Bureaucrats give faint glimmer of hope to Big Sur

By JOE LIVERNOIS

REP. LEON PANETTA had few encouraging words for 250 Big Sur residents Saturday as he and about two dozen politicians and bureaucrats described available emergency help from government sources.

"Those of you who have suffered serious damage will not be made whole," he said. "I wish you could, but it's not going to happen." He also told the crowd that jammed into the Big Sur Grange Hall in the Ripplewood area not to "anticipate that this will be an easy process."

Panetta introduced a host of representatives of governmental agencies as diverse as the Small Business Association, the Soil Conservation Service and the Internal Revenue Service.

The 16th District Congressman from Carmel Valley led the expedition of government representatives along what is left of Route 1 to Big Sur. Through some stretches, the highway is completely wiped out and traffic is forced to inch along a mucky one-lane detour.

Since landslides destroyed portions of the freeway about two weeks ago, the highway was opened only two hours daily. For one hour in the morning and an hour in the evening, the California Highway Patrol led convoys of Big Sur residents in and out of the community.

Identification that proves motorists live in Big Sur was required at the roadblock near the Palo Colorado Road and Highway 1 intersection before officers allowed motorist through.

Big Sur residents who met with Panetta and other officials last week said that tourism is the Big Sur 'lifeblood' and Highway 1 is the 'umbilical cord.'

But on Wednesday, Cal-Trans closed the highway to all traffic for between five and 10 days.

As a result, no tourists are allowed through. And California Transportation Department officials said they don't expect the highway will be opened to the public for at least another six weeks.

Big Sur residents who met with Panetta and other officials last week said that tourism is the Big Sur "lifeblood" and Highway 1 is the "umbilical cord."

Only a handful of Big Sur residents claimed the storm caused any physical damage to their homes or property. The damage that hurts is the money lost by a lack of visitors. About 35 businesses are affected, Panetta heard, as well as nearly 350 employees.

•

WHILE THE CROWD fired questions at Panetta and the others in the Grange Hall, Ken Daughters was in his Ripplewood Store. The sign in the window said the store was open, but customers only straggled in.

Daughters told the Pine Cone/Outlook that business at his store was down "about 90 percent" since the landslides closed Highway 1.

Across the street, Forrest Childs, proprietor of the Glen Oaks Restaurant, was in his restaurant and the tables were set on white tablecloth. But the restaurant was closed.

He told the Pine Cone/Outlook he would open two or three days a week for the local trade. "The locals are getting cabin fever," Childs said.

Childs pointed to the store across the street where Daughters kept a lonely vigil at the cash register and said most of the businesses in Big Sur might as well be open, even if the customers are gone. "All we have is time right now," he said.

He said he expected visitors from outside Monterey County to pour into Big Sur once the road is opened. "Everyone wants to see a disaster," he said.

Though the bleak situation was made bleaker by Panetta's statements, the crowd appeared to be in good spirits and managed pointed jokes about the political realities of their situation.

Panetta's introduction of Cal-Trans Regional Director Jesus Garcia prompted a minute-long outburst of cheering and applause. The response was in appreciation of the effort Cal-Trans crews have made to open the highway as much as they have.

Tales of crews that have worked 12-hour days without a day off in two months were traded through the meeting.

The crowd was unanimous in praise of Cal-Trans crew, but it was also anxious to know when the road would be open to everyday traffic.

Panetta asked Garcia when the highway would be open for permanent access, a question that prompted Lucia Lodge owner John Harlan to ask Panetta, "How much more rainfall do you expect?"

"We did not bring that representative here today," Panetta said as he looked over the bureaucrats who followed him to Big Sur.

•

COMEDICS ASIDE, Cal-Trans maintenance foreman Tom Saunders told the crowd that barring more terrific rainstorms that would certainly bring down more of the unstable hills, the highway could be open by mid-April. "I can't guarantee it," he said.

He said the department must secure right-of-way through some private property (a single property owner has been a holdout) and additional equipment must be imported to the area.

Saunders said the highway will be closed to even the convoys sometime in the next week for between five and 10 days so Cal-Trans crews can dynamite portions of the Big Sur range to replace portions of the highway which are now about 700 feet lower than they once were.

In the meantime, loss of tourism means loss of business and jobs in Big Sur, Gary Koeppel told Panetta.

Koeppel, president of the recently-reactivated Big Sur Chamber of Commerce, told Panetta that the 34 business the chamber of commerce represents will "look to you for a great deal of help" when they apply for economic injury loans through the Small Business Administration.

"We have 34 businesses here in which the only form of injury is lack of tourists," he said. The SBA has a loan program in which businesses who suffer no physical damage during a disaster, but suffer economic loss because of the disaster, could qualify for a loan to meet operating expenses.

"Knowing that one of your duties in Washington is as a member of the budget committee and that you have a lot of power over a lot of agencies, we will look to you for a great deal of help," he said.

Roy Hobbs, who represented the SBA in Big Sur Saturday, told the crowd that businesses qualify for the economic injury loan program "only as a last resort."

He said that only four out of 10 businesses who apply for the loans qualify. Businessmen who suffer economic losses must first exhaust their attempts to acquire loans through normal financial institutions, he said.

•

PANETTA TOLD the crowd that the business people in Big Sur, as well as other residents, "are going to have to push and you are going to have to squeeze" when they seek any help from the government.

"That's the name of the game," he said.

About half the crowd at the Grange Hall Saturday appeared to be primarily concerned about the availability of unemployment benefits and emergency food stamps.

Food stamp vouchers can not be cashed in at the Big Sur post office so, as a result of the Saturday meeting and at the request of Supervisor William Peters, four social workers from the Monterey County Social Services Department were sent to Big Sur Lodge Monday to provide food stamps to residents who qualify for emergency provisions.

The county workers gave about $3,800 worth of food stamps to about 60 Big Sur residents, mostly laid-off employees from Nepenthe and Big Sur, according to a county official.

The county employees returned Tuesday to provide food stamps to about 30 more residents.

Unemployed residents were discouraged to learn that their unemployment insurance claims could not be processed and their first checks will probably not be sent for another two weeks.

One resident told Panetta that "there are a lot of unemployed people who are going to be unemployed for a long time."

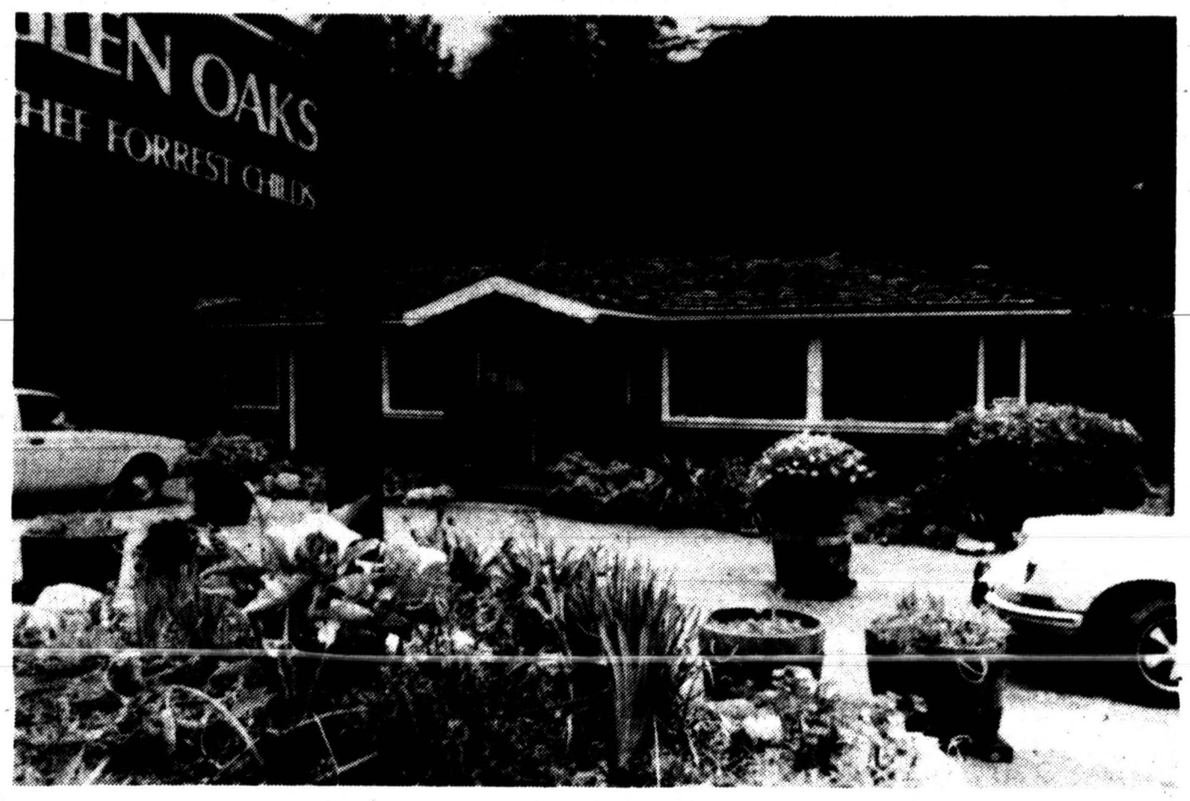
Chamber of commerce officials said they suspect that about 90 percent of the Big Sur workforce has been laid off.

Back at Ripplewood, meanwhile, Childs said he has already spent a day at the SBA office to apply for an economic injury loan and, through the course of the day, was sent through the bureaucratic shuffle and "six different stations."

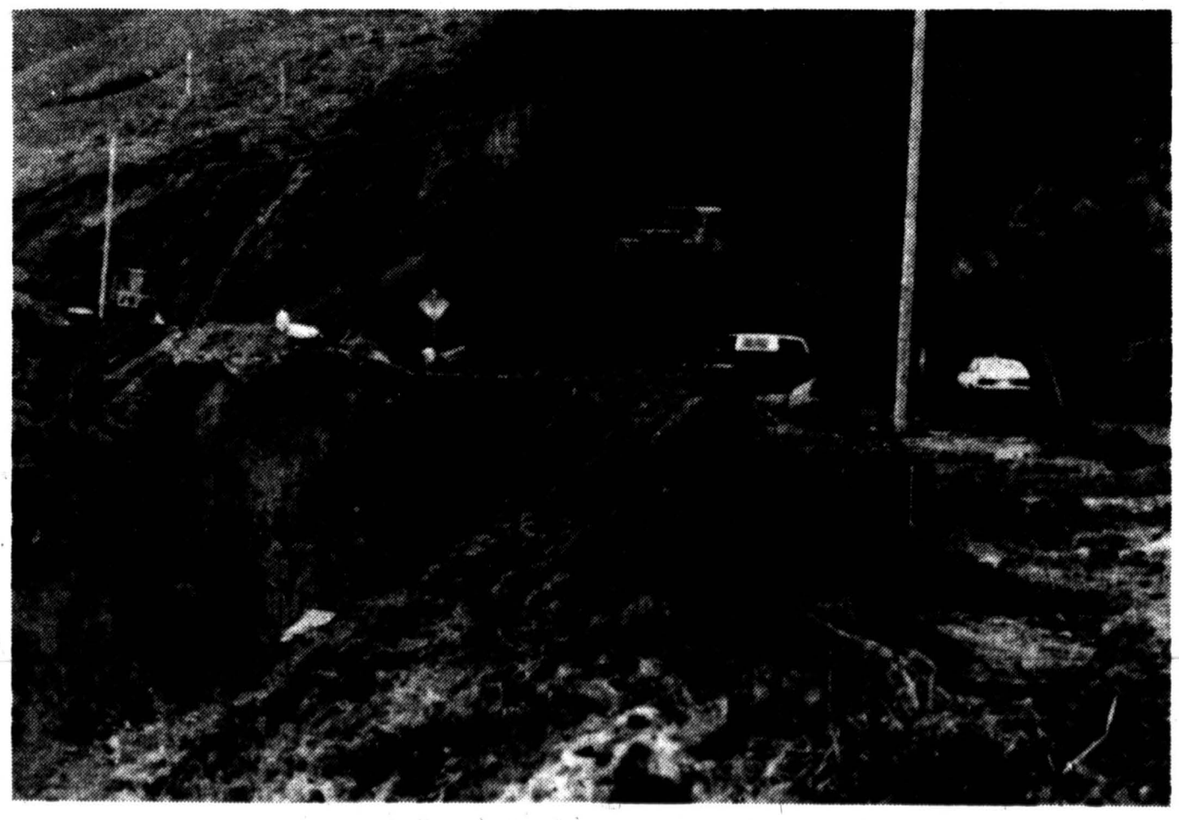
But he said he was not frustrated or angry about the process. "In fact, I was rather embarrassed to be there," he said. "After all, I didn't suffer any physical damage. Most of the other people there did. And I saw on television while I was down there that people in Alviso were floating to their homes in bath tubs."

His hope, he said, is that the disaster gawkers will do more than just gawk when the road is finally open. He hopes they will stop and eat at his restaurant.

REP. LEON PANETTA told the 250 Big Sur residents who crammed into the Big Sur Grange Hall Saturday morning not to expect to be "made whole" with help from the government after recent storms caused the destruction of the Big Sur "umbilical cord," Highway 1. Panetta was joined by about two dozen other bureaucrats and politicians who explained how their agency might be able to help residents beleaguered by a tourist trade that hit a dead end when the landslides washed away portions of the highway.



THE "CLOSED" SIGN in the door at Glen Oaks Restaurant in Big Sur does not reflect the sunny outlook proprietor Forrest Childs has about the closure of Highway 1 after recent storms. He said he expects more tourists will visit Big Sur than usual once Highway 1 is opened. Meanwhile, he said he will open the restaurant two or three days a week while the highway is closed to give local residents somewhere to cater to locals, who he said are beginning to feel the symptoms of "cabin fever."



THE HILLS of Big Sur along Highway 1 are occasionally the scene of bulldozing work (top, right) while Cal-Trans crews work long hours each day to carve a new roadway through the area to replace the highway that is crumbling away after landslides caused by winter rainstorms pounded the Big Sur coast. The nearly impassable highway has put a virtual stop to tourism in Big Sur.

Existentialist teacher plans to retire from Carmel High in June

By MICHAEL GARDNER

LLOYD BASKERVILLE, the resident existentialist, environmentalist and confidant to students at Carmel High School, will retire at the end of the spring term.

A ceramics teacher with a penchant for Shakespeare, Baskerville is a 65-year-old who has an instant rapport with his students. A lover of Gregorian chants who teaches to the tunes of The Busboys, Baskerville has a reputation at the school as a man who marches to the beat of a different drummer.

Despite his nonconformist mannerisms and existentialist philosophies, Baskerville is respected by the staff and considered one of the best teachers at Carmel High School. In 1982, he received the first Alan Griffin Teaching Award, designed to honor the top teacher on the Monterey Peninsula.

"We all have a tendency to some extent to stereotype the school teacher, but with all the powers of heaven and earth, you could not put Lloyd in one of those stereotypes," said counselor Louise Tanous, who has known Baskerville for 13 years.

'Lloyd is one of those people who touch students in terms of really being able to communicate,' she said. 'He's able to find some subject and some concern that has some meaning to students.'

Baskerville is one of those rare teachers who has a "magical" way of turning anti-education youths into productive students, Mrs. Tanous said.

"Lloyd is one of those people who touch students in terms of really being able to communicate," she said. "He's able to find some subject and some concern that has some meaning to students. He has that ability to go where they are.

"He can absorb students and help them turn things around. He has made my job easier as a counselor and when I was teaching much easier. He was able to turn around the attitude of the students," she continued.

Baskerville is the "resident therapist" at Carmel High School, Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly said.

"We sometimes call him our resident therapist, as he has provided people the opportunity to express themselves in many ways using clay, talking in a private corner, sharing feelings and receiving guidance," Mrs. Kading-Kelly said.

"Lloyd has been one of our most versatile teachers in terms of meeting students' needs both academically and spiritually," she added. "He has certainly been a significant person in many Carmel citizens' lives and he will be greatly missed."

Supt. William Rand agrees: "The consistent thread throughout his teaching career is his ability to reach students.

"What makes education for kids so enriching is the diverse staff that we have which challenges the students' way of thinking. That's where Lloyd plays an important role," Rand added.

•

THE PHILOSOPHY according to Baskerville is best suited for the atmosphere in room 39, which in itself appears to be a statement about the man behind the pottery wheel.

Baskerville, when not guiding inexperienced hands around a pottery wheel, can be found sitting in a Yoga position on a table.

Snuggled in a back room is an unused desk covered with clay dust, books and cassette tapes. The small room that serves as his office seems more like a closet waiting for spring cleaning.

His ecological philosophy could be interpreted through a mound of used clay plopped on a table in the center of the room. The clay is molded to a form similar to the mountain featured in Close Encounters of The Third Kind.

The pottery wheels rhythmically follow the beat of The Who, The Busboys, The Eagles and The Police — rock and new wave bands unknown to most of his generation, who best remember the golden age of Tommy Dorsey, Les Brown and Glen Miller.

Later during the breaks, Baskerville will push the eject button on the tape machine and slip in some classical music.

"I like all music. I have my music and they (the students) have theirs. I listen to rock and roll for two hours and go home and play Gregorian chants just to clean my head out," he said just loudly enough for the students to hear. They laughed.

Baskerville credits his existentialist philosophies and his non-preaching attitude for his success with the students as teacher and confidant.

"I'm an existentialist. They get in their music and I get in mine. In other words, we share.

"The first thing that happens when you reach a higher consciousness is your tolerance is amplified. I think that's the key to it. In understanding, you understand where they're coming from and you don't feel threatened."

Baskerville could also be described as a realist when it comes to the issue of high school age drinking, sex and drug abuse.

"They use drugs. They drink. The parties' successes are determined by the kegs of beer," he said. "I find this very hard to take. They can't be together and have fun without drugs and beer.

•

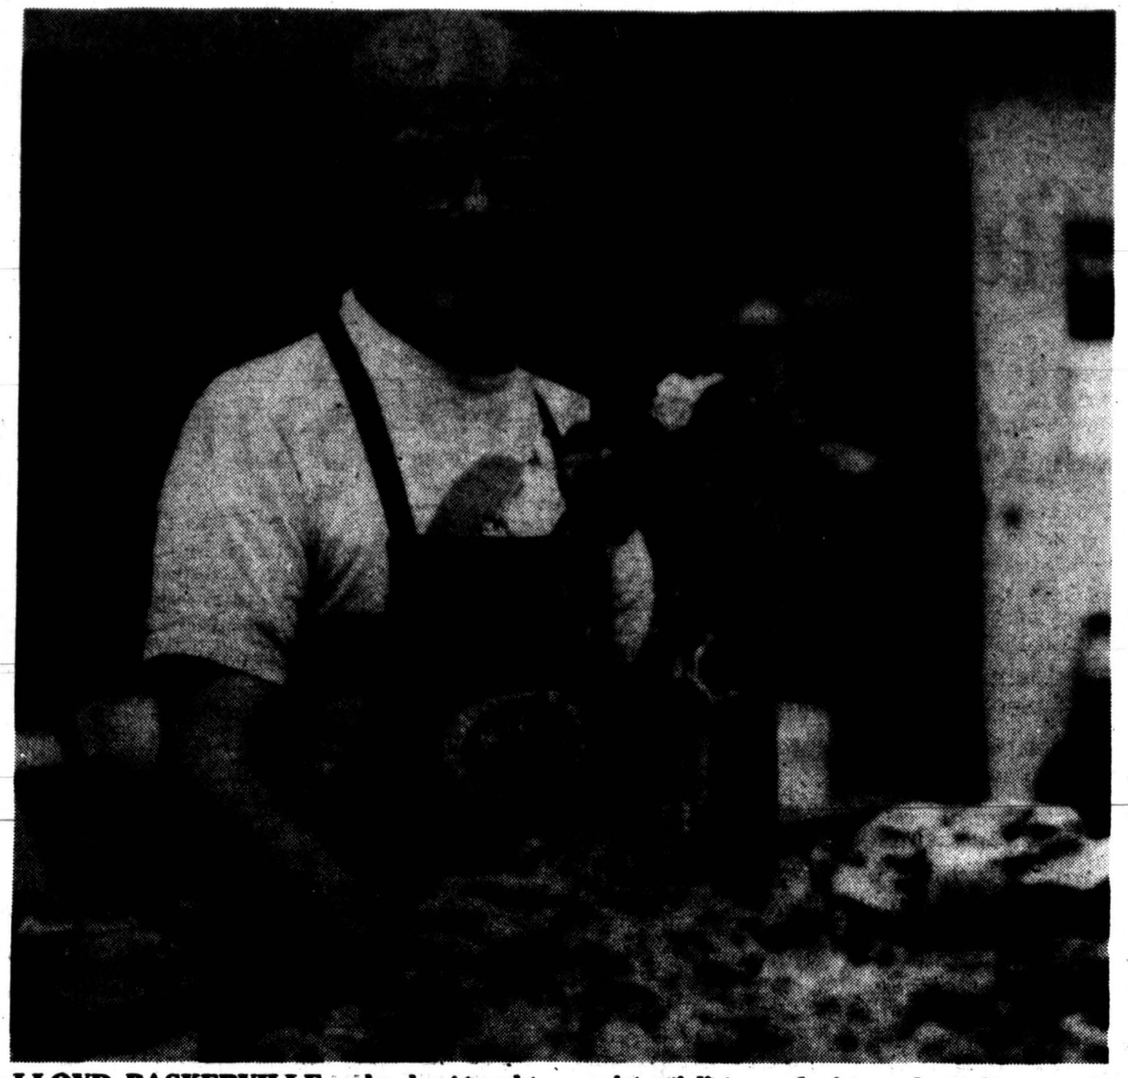
'BUT I don't pretend it doesn't exist. I've taken care of a lot of distressed kids. On weekends, I've even taken some kids to the crisis center, especially in the days when they were into speed," Baskerville said.

But acceptance of his role as both teacher and confidant to the students did not come easily for Baskerville.

"When I realized some years ago that the kids were coming to me, I suddenly had this rush of feelings," Baskerville recalled.

Unsure of his role, Baskerville went to see his "dear friend," psychiatrist Dr. Friedy Heisler.

"I went to her and told Friedy that these kids were coming to me. We had a long talk. She just told me that 'you do the job' so I just relaxed and accepted the fact," Baskerville explained.



LLOYD BASKERVILLE, who has taught everything from English to history to Spanish at Carmel High School, will retire at the end of the spring term. Baskerville, the resident existentialist, ecologist and student confidant, is currently the ceramics teacher. (M.G. photo.)

From that time many years ago, Baskerville has seen students become more aware and open about the mores of society.

"People are the same and are the result of what sort of environment they come from, permissive or non-permissive structure," Baskerville said. "The way they're going to behave is determined by cultural patterns."

Baskerville recounted a recent episode where one student was harrassed because several peers perceived him as a homosexual.

"Some of the kids were very indignant about the other kids who expressed some things," Baskerville said. "The kids talked very logically and intelligently about concerns that were not talked about 25 years ago."

'The first thing that happens when you reach a higher consciousness is your tolerance is amplified. I think that's the key to it. In understanding, you understand where they're coming from and you don't feel threatened.'

It was 25 years ago that Baskerville was hired as a reading consultant and language arts teacher.

Ceramics, however, best fits his personal educational philosophies, he said.

"I didn't leave teaching in the classroom because I was unhappy. I found myself about 16 years ago with an academic classroom trying to reach the creative process of kids.

"I was limited, particulary with the kids in this community who I see as creative, as a human being, as opposed to an object."

Students help find their identity in clay, Baskerville believes.

"I know from my own experience working with clay that it comes as close to essence in the creative process as any medium that I know of," he explained.

•

'YOU WATCH and see it happen so quickly before your eyes. This is earth. It has no form and then the student projects with his or her mind an image of the way they want the clay to be formed into. This to me is the ultimate identity. You're identifying with the creative process."

The search for identity at the high school age level is even more important in today's high-tech world of computers and assembly line art.

"That's why I'm here. I'm not trying to make potters out of these kids. The fact that they get so good amazes me."

"I personally believe in a comprehensive high school. I don't believe in an elitist principle at all. It's not something that is simply fed into a person. It has to be unprogrammed. The decisions have to be made as a human being, based on our own destiny," he said.

Baskerville has taught every kind of English course offered at the school. He speaks fluent enough Spanish to have taught it for some time and has even coached the track team.

An avid reader, Baskerville enjoys books on a variety of subjects that range from Shakespeare to cultural anthropolgy to archaeology.

Baskerville is also a published author in the field of science fiction, but "I won't talk about that. That's a part of my private life," he said.

The reason for his retirement is simple, said Baskerville, who plans to expand his attendance at conciousness-raising seminars, travel and study.

Carmel Police Log

(A partial list of Carmel police and fire activities)

Monday, March 7

1:30 a.m.: ARREST: Two San Ramon men brought into the police department on narcotic charges. One was cited for possession of marijuana (less than one ounce) and released. The second man was arrested on possession of cocaine and subsequently also on an out-of-county traffic warrant; he was transported to county jail.

11:05 a.m.: MEDICAL EMERGENCY on Rotunda Drive; patient transported to Community Hospital.

3:58 p.m.: GASOLINE WASHDOWN, Dolores Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

10:00 p.m.: FIRE ALARM. Panel alarm on Mission Street at Fifth Avenue; no merit.

Tuesday, March 8

8:55 a.m.: MEDICAL EMERGENCY, Del Mesa Carmel. Patient taken to Community Hospital.

10:34 a.m.: FIRE ALARM. Panel alarm, Mission Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues; no merit.

12:32 p.m.: GASOLINE WASHDOWN, San Carlos Street and Ninth Avenue.

12:47 p.m.: THEFT. Owner reported vehicle stolen, Mission Street between Third and Fourth avenues. Also reported home burglarized. Under investigation.

1:50 p.m.: FIRE ALARM, vicinity of 12th and Junipero avenues; nothing found.

3:46 p.m.: BURGLARY of residence at Guadalupe Street and Third Avenue. Resident discovered bicycle missing from unlocked garage; police department had already recovered the bicycle and was holding it to be claimed.

9:24 p.m.: BURGLARY at Jade Tree Inn, Junipero between Fifth and Sixth avenues. A Seattle woman reported the theft of $490 worth of jewelry from her room. Included: a gold choker, gold chain and a Chinaman pendant. The burglar also broke into three other guest rooms and made an attempt to open a locked suitcase, but was unsuccessful; no other items were reported stolen.

Wednesday, March 9

8:36 a.m.: THEFT OF VEHICLE, Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue. This vehicle had been left in a hotel parking lot for about a month. The Carmel Police Department was called by the owner — a leasing company in Canada. The theft was verified and the car impounded. However, the supposed drivers of the vehicle — wanted by the FBI in Los Angeles — were no longer in the vicinity.

2:03 p.m.: MOTEL SKIP. Occurred last Friday at San Antonio House. Under investigation.

Thursday, March 10

9:15 a.m.: SMOKE INVESTIGATION, Junipero between Eighth and 10th avenues. Attributed to incinerator.

3:18 p.m.: MEDICAL EMERGENCY at Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue; patient left in physician's care.

7:44 p.m.: FIRE ALARM. Panel alarm, Mission Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues. No merit.

Friday, March 11

9:30 a.m.: ASSISTANCE CALL: Fire Department responded to call at First Avenue and Carpenter Street; assisted elderly man out of bathtub.

9:46 a.m.: ASSISTANCE CALL: Welfare check for friends of elderly person, Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

3:23 p.m.: HIT AND RUN, Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue. Moderate damage to left rear fender of parked vehicle.

3:41 p.m.: DIESEL FUEL SPILL; washdown by fire personnel at Ocean Avenue and Scenic Road.

Saturday, March 12

1:45 a.m.: STRONGARM ROBBERY, Ocean Avenue and Carmelo Street. A Carmel woman who works nights in a local hotel was taking a brief walk before reporting to work. When she came up Ocean Avenue and reached Carmelo Street, she was grabbed from behind and held. Her wallet, containing about $8, was taken from her pocket and she was pushed to the ground, receiving a blow to the head. She was transported to Community Hospital; treated and released.

Sunday, March 13

5:33 p.m.: LITTERING: Subject cited for littering at Devendorf Park.

Billy Quon's sale pending

By FLORENCE MASON

AN EBULLIENT Bill Lee confirmed that there is a "solid" deal pending for the sale of his Billy Quon's restaurant at The Crossroads. If the proposed sale goes through, it will be the first major change of ownership at the shopping center since it opened nearly two nears ago.

Lee said his restaurant has always been listed for sale, but that he wanted someone to continue its "young, busy and bustling style." It wasn't until William Cox, developer of the McArthur Park restaurant group came along that he felt he had found the right new owners.

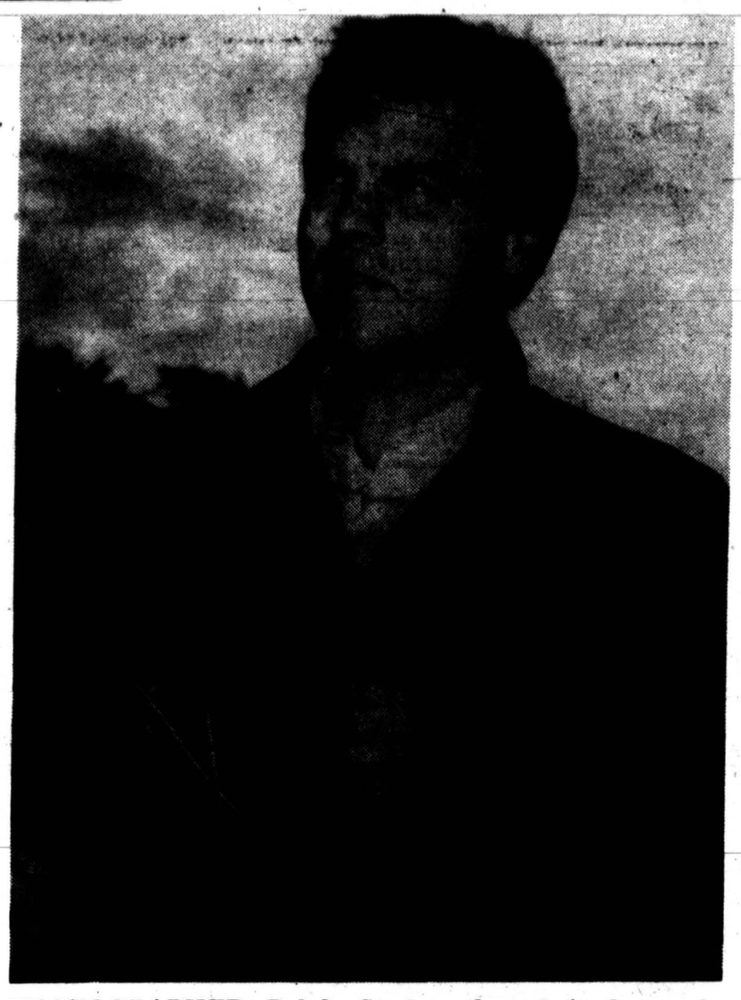
"I patterned Billy Quon's after their style, so we hit it off immediately," he told me. He also credited his business properties agent, Don Bowen, with "a genuine feeling for stores and restaurants." He shared my concern about who would buy it." A year ago, Bowen formed his own company — Carmel Business Sales — as a division of Independent Realty Associates. The sale of Billy Quon's will be his seventh restaurant sale since March of last year.

Tomorrow (March 18) is the last day for removal of contingencies in the sale of Billy Quon's, Lee said. The close of escrow is scheduled for mid-April.

The sale does not involve Lee's other Crossroads interest — Cappuccino Carmel — which he said would continue as it now is..

What will the energetic Bill Lee do next? "I don't know for sure," he said. "I like being there (Billy Quon's). But my greatest love is putting things together." Lee added that he is sure he will stay in the restaurant business, but right now he is considering a different type of shop, still in The Crossroads. He said: "The Crossroads people have been marvelous; I would be happy to find something else right here."

Lee had considerable praise for the MacArthur Park operations in San Francisco and Palo Alto. "I'm so excited about them — they always have a simple menu and excellent food," he said. That and his ambition to get out and do new things came together for Bill Lee.



PHOTOGRAPHER Ralph Starkweather arrived on the peninsula and opened a new business in the Carmel Press building.

A VERSATILE PHOTOGRAPHER

Ralph Starkweather brings something new to Carmel. At least it was a new concept to me when I first heart about it, and apparently new also to members of the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board.

In Starkweather's own words, on his successful application for a business license: "The majority of the business will focus on the highest quality photographic reproduction of artists' work — whether it will be an oil painting, watercolor, sculpture, glass work, woodwork, etc. I intend to photograph the artists behind the creations also."

Starkweather explained that he reproduces paintings brought to him, and also duplicates slides. The work is done with electronic flash lighting, so that is the only equipment he needs in his Carmel location. He shares the space at Carmel Press (on Seventh Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets) with that business' new owner, Darryl Kenyon.

"It's a separate room about 16 by 18 feet. That's all I need," Starkweather said. "I don't want a high volume business. I'll just be working several days a week." He will also continue making what he called "character portraits" and presenting programs of slides from Switzerland and France.

Starkweather Photography also means photographing classic cars on location around the peninsula. These and other photographs by the former Newport Beach resident have appeared in Life magazine, Smithsonian publications and Road and Track. His work is also included in the files of West Light in Los Angeles, a cooperative of West Coast-based photographers.

A little out of his usual line but something that gave him an unusual experience: Starkweather traveled with Mohammed Ali for several years as the famous boxer's photographer.

TRY IT — YOU'LL LIKE IT

Last week I had my first opportunity to have lunch at Le Cochon Lacque, which opened earlier this year in space vacated by Charlie O's restaurant (Dolores Street south of Ocean Avenue). It was different — and delightful.

At lunchtime, there is no menu. Soup is brought to your table (that day, an excellent watercress) and then you are served from a buffet table set by the front window. We had chicken creole, which had a slightly sweet and very agreeable taste, rice, a fresh garden salad and rolls.

Dessert was a light cake. Beverages and attentive service went along with the reasonable prix fixe meal. The atmosphere is quiet and relaxing and there is a lot more space around the table and booths than there was before.

The next day, the lunch feature was to be an Oriental buffet. At dinner time, sisters An Ngyuyen and Hai Huynh offer a full menu, which features Oriental or continental cuisine.

MORE IS BETTER — AND MORE FUN

The Red Rooster, one of my favorite shops in The Barnyard, has expanded and moved right into the adjacent space vacated by the Oriental Shop. When shopowner Lolita Tedrow retired, Tom Lawler saw it as the perfect opportunity. He reported that customers are saying "It looks the same but it's different," and that suits him fine.

What's different is that he gained twice as much space — from 800 to 1,600 sq. ft. He had to break through the dividing wall to accomplish that, and remodel the front of the Oriental Shop. "I didn't want to lose the feeling we had before," he said. "It's working."

Lawler's arts, crafts and gifts shop opened with the Barnyard in 1976. In recent years, he has changed its concept slowly.

"I started with arts and crafts," he explained. "I've retained the ones that sell well, and at the same time we're moving into more items that are fun, that give people pleasure. In these times I think people can use it."

The shop still offers ceramic oil lamps, paperweights and other gift and practical items, but it also has increasing numbers of humorous garden and home accessories, as well as personal items.

Still available at the Red Rooster are Lasercraft desk accessories and other objects. Lawler is proud of the "certificate of recognition" he just received from Lasercraft for distinguished performance in retail sales of that company's products.

MOVING DAYS

The new location for Carmel Valley's Caravan to Mazar (antiques, Oriental rugs, tribal clothing and jewelry) is in the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street near Seventh Avenue. The space — occupied by Richard Catlin and Associates — became available because of the property owner's plans to have the court occupied only by retail businesses.

Admittedly unhappy, Dick Catlin confirmed that his firm must move after 30 years in Carmel, the last 13 in the Court of the Fountains.

When I talked with him, he had just been told by the owners (the Leidig estate) that he would have to be out within a week. The need for such a quick move proved as upsetting to him as the move itself.

"We're building two office buildings on Carmel Rancho Lane," Catlin said. "But we didn't intend to be there ourselves. We want to stay in Carmel if we can find a suitable location." Catlin said the immediate solution might be for his firm to "rough it" in the still-unfinished new buildings while it continues to seek that just-right Carmel location.

WHAT YOU HEAR ABOUT REAL ESTATE IS TRUE

Real estate sales on the Monterey Peninsula have jumped by an even higher percentage than that recorded nationwide in the early months of 1983.

That was the good news I garnered from Ed Brown, president of the Carmel Board of Realtors and from a friend, Rod Guilfoil, one of the energetic brokers out there on the firing line.

Brown gave me his own "rule of thumb" statistics.

"Conditional sales (those recorded as going into escrow) for the first two months of 1982 were 163; for the first two months this year they are 238," he said. Although that comes out to an inrease of approximately 46 percent, Brown preferred to take a conservative point of view, rounding out that figure to "a 40 percent increase."

Brown attributed the improvement primarily to lower interest rates. He added that "there is lots of activity out there, with more people responding to advertisements."

Guilfoil, a Carmel resident who is associated with the Mitchell Group, confirmed the upward trend. "Sales people in this office and other I've talked to are encouraged. They definitely see an upturn in sales. We're busy." He added that it is particularly gratifying to find "really interested lookers" at open houses.

The National Association of Realtors' figures for January showed a record jump of 15.5 percent in the sales of existing single-family homes throughout the country. This report followed government statistics which showed that new housing starts jumped a record 35.9 percent in the same period.

According to the national association, the January increase was the sharpest month-to-month gain since real estate agents started keeping these monthly records 16 years ago.

LOOKING BACK AT STORMY WEATHER

The storm-induced, extended power outage that hit the business area earlier this month was just a problem to be solved for one local bakery. And Hector De Smet's solved it with the combined resources of their Ocean Avenue bakery, their Monterey facility and even the De Smets' own home. Make that their own motor home.

Beseiged by what must have looked like hordes of half-awake, thirsty and hungry customers, manager Becky Estes (recently married daughter of Hector and Betty De Smet) called upon all those resources throughout a hectic Tuesday which set all kinds of records for the store.

"We brought Hector and Betty's motor home over and hooked everything up to that generator," Becky said. "Then we got extra coffee from our Monterey store, and extra deliveries of bakery goods from there too."

Becky checked the cash register tapes. "We sold 300 doughnuts tht day and 200 Danish — that's about 150 more than normal!" she remarked.

Apparently the only bakery in town that could be open at an early hour that day, De Smet's sold 180 large cups of coffee and 154 small cups, the majority between 7 a.m. and 9:30 a.m.

Becky added that two people in the Carmel store made coffee for an hour straight and "the pots were never empty." A total of eight people — instead of the usual four — worked upstairs throughout the day. At one time, five gallons of coffee brought from the Monterey store disappeared in 15 minutes.

"It was a lot like Christmas eve three years ago," Becky recalled. "Fortunately, we got our power back a bit sooner this time."

Another outcome of the storm for De Smet's was that the bakery was unable to deliver a number of orders to restaurants and stores in storm-isolated Big Sur. "We donated them to the Carmel Red Cross chapter. They were picked up within five minutes," said an appreciative Becky Estes.

★ ★ ★

Much has been said and written about the storms that closed February and opened March on the peninsula. What remains in the minds of many people is the quiet, effective caring of those who helped in so many different ways to make the experience more bearable for those directly affected.

We're talking about the rescue of people from our canyons, the opening of homes to victims, the stalwart work of the Carmel Red Cross, the local hostelries which provided shelter (notably, Larry Little's Sands Motel in Carmel), our restaurants that offered food to victims and workers (kudos to La Boheme, Friar Tuck's and El Topo), donations from Rotary clubs in Carmel and Monterey, the invaluable assistance of the Salvation Army trucks and personnel, and the generous gifts of time and substance from innumerable individuals.

Although it is in their line of duty to help in such crises, public service groups such as the police, fire and public works departments went well beyond the call of duty to provide aid.

And amid all this, those officers and other workers didn't neglect their normal duties — it was "business as usual" in the midst of chaos. One small example: at the height of the storm one dark night, when electricity was just a memory throughout the business district, officers of the Carmel Police Department patrolled the area under their watch commander's directive to "cruise with your alley lights on" to protect the darkened stores. One officer even paused to check for candles left burning in a closed and locked store, to make sure they had burned down safely.

NOTES AND NAMES

The "Merchant of the Month" in the lobby of Great Western Savings and Loan (Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue) is Alphabet Soup, Wendy Phelps' shop in Del Dono Court. Quilted items are featured, along with a variety of the other things that almost span the alphabet — A to Z.

The ninth annual dinner of the Monterey Peninsula Chefs Association was a special occasion for Wendy Brodie: she was named Chef of the Year. The Carmel Valley resident, married to insurance man Alan Altree, is executive-corporate chef for Cambridge Plan International. She also was chef at Simpson's Restaurant in Carmel for five years.

★ ★ ★

Carmel Police Officer Don Fuselier was one of three principal speakers at the recent hotel/motel security workshop sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and the California Motel Association. Sergeant Fuselier and representatives from the county sheriffs department and from a security firm addressed the group on methods to protect their property and guests, how to avoid or handle embezzlement and bad checks, and more how-to on locks, lighting, training of employees and crime reporting.

Santa Catalina class reunites

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

The Sunset Room of La Playa Hotel was alive with reminiscences and the making of new memories when members of the 1953-1954 classes of Santa Catalina School gathered for a pioneer reunion last Saturday evening.

The reunion — one year in the making — was organized by Laurie Angel McGuinness and Beezie Leyden Moore. Mrs. McGuinness was the first student ever registered at the school.

"In the fall of 1950 when Santa Catalina opened its doors for the first time there were only two high school grades — freshmen and sophomores," Mrs. McGuinness explained. "We two pioneering classes were like a family and we decided to create this gala to celebrate jointly a pioneer reunion."

Thirty-two Santa Catalina graduates, many with their spouses, arrived for the two-day event from various parts of the country including Maryland, Virginia and Oregon.

"It's the first time that many of us have been back to the school since graduation," said Mrs. McGuinness. "We're delighted that 100 percent of the graduating class of 1953, most of the class of 1954 and many of the original faculty are here for the reunion."

Carmelite Lee Crowe was among those who celebrated. Lee, now 78 years old, was the school drama and speech coach and was the only male teacher at the school when the pioneer classes attended. He passed out a lot of hugs and was delighted that he remembered every one of his students.

Another Carmelite who did a bit of reminiscing was Will Gahagan — an early faculty member and father of two Santa Catalina graduates. Will recalled that he taught English and history to freshmen and seniors from 1953 to 1955.

During the program he took the floor to recite a poem of affection which he had written for the late Sister Mary Kieran, O.P. who founded Santa Catalina and in whose honor the reunion was held.

"Sister Kieran was everything to us," Mrs. McGuinness said. "She was our principal, our mother, our friend, our confidant and the one person in our lives who motivated us to strive for excellence in thought, word and deed."

To honor Sister Kieran, the pioneer classes created a Sister Mary Kieran Memorial Scholarship Fund which will benefit a deserving Santa Catalina student each year.

To start the fund the former students and faculty members put together a "memories quilt." Money from chances sold on the quilt totaled $1,215. Lucky ticket holder was pioneer member Gray Brunham Hynes.

During the festivities Santa Catalina Principal Sister Carlotta talked about her fond memories of Sister Kieran.

After a prime rib dinner with all the trimmings, the group sang some of their old school songs. They were accompanied on piano by Dow Berggren, husband of one of the pioneers.

As the evening came to an end it was obvious that the Santa Catalina graduates were hoping that, somewhere down the road, there will be a re-run of an unforgettable two-day reunion — and a long walk down memory lane.

AMONG THOSE who attended the reunion dinner were (from left) John Snapp, Fleana Giglio Snapp, George Hynes and Gray Burnham Hynes. Mrs. Snapp and Mrs. Hynes are members of the pioneer classes.

Jesters stage Bid-A-Long

The Jesters did it again!

More than 300 people attended the Jesters' biannual Bid-A-Long given at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club last Saturday evening.

Treasure seekers who had been invited to spend their time and money at the Jesters' biggest fund-raiser of the year did just that. Many of them were so anxious for a preview of the 300 or more fabulous items to be auctioned, they arrived before the 7 p.m. opening.

The Jesters, a fund-raising auxiliary for the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, has more than 300 active members, many of whom were involved in the Bid-A-Long in one way or another. Much praise for the tremendous success of the event must go to Chairwoman Audrey Schrader and her Co-chairwoman Julia Puleo.

The auction included such items as art objects, antiques, fine wines, designer clothes, parties and trips — including a cruise-for-two on the Royal Viking Line. This particular cruise, valued at $6,874 went to Mr. and Mrs. Alex Olivetti for $5,500.

The rather formal evening included a sumptuous buffet with delicious edibles such as ham, beef, barbecued chicken, meatballs, various cheeses and numerous other good things, including fruit trays which featured giant strawberries.

Julia Puleo summed it up nicely: "It was a thoroughly enjoyable evening for everyone involved — very successful as a result of the participation of donors and guests. Now that it's all over we're already eagerly anticipating "Bid-A-Long '85."

Julia estimated the auction grossed more than $30,000 which means that, thanks to the Jesters, the museum will receive a very nice check.

BRITTANY'S TO PRESENT LUNCHEON-FASHION SHOW

Another spring parade of fashions will be the luncheon-fashion show presented by Brittany's on March 25. Things will get underway with a bit of champagne-sipping at the designers' dress shop and will continue with luncheon and the fashion parade at the Mandarin Restaurant at 1 p.m.

Brittany's manager Louise Hesemeyer said the show will feature both the casual and classic look. She said this year's favorite colors are pinks, blues and grays, with red and sand the favorite color for knits.

Lines of clothing to be modeled include Givenchy, Geoffrey Beene, St. John Knit, Sassoon, Peter Lynne and several others. Some of the ladies who will model the clothing are Marge Cook, Joan Charleson, Diana Clancey, Chris Lyman and Caroline Greenwood. All are local and some are professional models.

Brittany's carries Bill Blass and Geoffrey Beene swimwear, so a variety of bathing suits will be included in the show. Look for many of the swim suits to feature the polka dot look as it's very "in" this spring.

"Women want to look like women," said Louise, who added that spring fashions have a soft, feminine look.

Jewelry from Crossroad Jewelers will be modeled as will a variety of other accessories.

Commentator for the show will be Debbie Bradburn.

Helping Louise welcome guests will be Brittany staff members and also Shirley Jones of The Sandpipers.

Seating capacity is limited to 100 so those who wish to attend should call Louise at Brittany's (624-8991). Tickets are $6.50.

"PANHELLENIC WELCOMES SPRING" PARTY

The Monterey Peninsula Bay National Panhellenic will sponsor a special get-together titled: "Panhellenic Welcomes Spring" from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. April 16. The party will be held at the Pebble Beach home of Mrs. Dirk van der Burch.

As hostess, Mrs. van der Burch will be assisted by Mrs. Bernice Imlay, Mrs. Patti Bradshaw, Mrs. J.L. Strong, Mrs. Albert Tomblin, Mrs. F.V. Johnston, Mrs. Thomas Walton, Lisa Mitchell, Alida Davis and Miss J. M. Peacock.

Non-Panhellenic friends (men and women), sorority women and national Panhellenic members are invited to join in the fun. A no-host bar will be available and refreshments will include delectable canapes donated by club members and professional Peninsula caterers. There will also be door prizes.

Tickets are $2.50 and can be purchased by contacting Mrs. Patti Bradshaw at 384-3884.

All proceeds from the party will go to the organizations philanthropic fund.

"VICTORIAN REFLECTIONS" MARCH 22 AT MPCC

In spite of all the rain, there's a feeling of spring in the air and for most of us it will be a most welcome time — a time for acting a bit giddy, planning vacations, falling in love (oh yes, that too!) and attending the inevitable fashion show-luncheons which dominate the social scene this time of year.

The Monterey County Symphony Guild will present the 22nd Symphonie d'Elegance titled: "Victorian Reflections" at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club on March 22.

That one is yet to come but one fashion event which takes place today (March 17) is "Saks from Seaside" presented by the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services and held at Rancho Canada.

The fashions, all from the MPVS Thrift Shop located on Broadway in Seaside, will be modeled by 15 MPVS volunteers. After the show the clothing will be sold "on the spot" and MPVS President Frances McLean said there will be some terrific bargains.

The affair will get underway with a social hour at 11:30 a.m. followed by a luncheon of stuffed chicken breast in wine sauce with all the trimmings, and the fashion show at 12:30 p.m.

One highlight will be the honor paid to Mrs. Martha Kinney by MPVS members. Mrs. Kinney has been an active member of the group for more than 30 years.

Chairwoman of the event is Jo Owen, who also did all the decorations. Commentator will be Mrs. Christine Schuyler.

The MPVS has more than 100 active members who last year donated in excess of $60,000 to various organizations including the American Field Service, Boy Scouts of America, The Carmel Foundation, Carmel Youth Center and the Family Resource Center.

Legion offers scholarship

Members of the senior class at Carmel High School and the Robert Louis Stevenson School are invited to compete for a four year scholarship valued at $2,000 offered by Carmel Post 512, the American Legion, said Alvin Chapin, chairman of the Charles M. Childers Scholarship Committee.

Candidates for the award must submit the following material to Carmel Post 512, P.O. Box 512, Carmel, Calif. 93921, before May 20 to be considered for this year's award:

- An essay of more than 1,000 words on a patriotic theme. The 1983 theme is "My Idea of a Good Citizen."
- A letter of recommendation from the school principal.
- A copy of S.A.T. score, or related equivalent.

The winning candidate will be selected on a "best qualified" basis; however, in the event of a tie, the candidate least qualified financially will be given the award. Bonus points toward selection will be given candidates who are dependents of Legion members, or of persons eligible for Legion membership.

Candidates must be prepared to enroll in a field leading to public service (e.g., education, medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, law, journalism, military or naval science) or a related field approved by the Scholarship Committee. The award will be paid to the college of the winner's choice.

THE MONTEREY Bay Wellesley Club will sponsor its annual book sale at the Carmel Middle School cafeteria on Carmel Valley Road March 19 and 20. Helping to sort the books were Theresa Thomas (left) and Marian Kwon.

WELLESLEY CLUB ANNUAL BOOK SALE

Members of the Monterey Bay Wellesley Club are busily preparing for their annual book sale March 19-20 at the Carmel Middle School cafeteria on Carmel Valley Road. On Saturday, March 19 the hours of the sale will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Sunday, March 20 hours will be 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Proceeds from the sale will go to the Barbara Bell Thompson Memorial Fund which helps provide scholarships for financial aid students at Wellesley.

Club members recently gathered for their annual monthly meeting at the Carmel home of Mrs. Herman Schull.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Margaret Barnes, who spoke on the Wellesley College rare books collection. She said the collection includes many first editions of poet Robinson Jeffers' work. She also said it is unusual for an Eastern college to have so many early works of a western poet. Mrs. Edith Jones Tower, for years a Carmel resident, gave the college many of the Jeffers' works.

At Mrs. Towers' death, the Wellesley Club gave a rare book to Wellesley College in her honor. Club member Lis Plank said the book, Robert Estienne's New Testament (1550) is of particular significance as it has three sizes of royal Greek type which Estienne developed. She said Estienne was royal printer to Francis I of France.

The college also received the 28th book of The Loving Shepherdess from Mrs. Towers' heirs in 1979. The edition was limited to 150 copies. Printed in 1956, it contained nine original etchings by Jean Kellogg, a local artist.

Wellesley Club officers are: Mrs. William W. Dunn, president; Mrs. Arthur Bowman, vice president; Mrs. Lynn W. Peterson, secretary; and Mrs. Samuel P. Felix Jr., treasurer.

Piccadilly opponents mount initiative petition

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A DOOR-to-door campaign to place the fate of Piccadilly Park on the ballot will begin March 24.

Former Carmel Mayor Barney Laiolo, leader of the initiative campaign to sell the Dolores Street park property, said his supporters will begin obtaining signatures early next Thursday morning.

Their action comes as a result of the refusal of the Carmel City Council Tuesday to place an advisory measure before voters on the disposition of the 40-by-100 foot vacant lot on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

The initiative drive cannot begin until March 24 because state law mandates a 21-day waiting period between the time the intent of the initiative is published and when signatures can actually be collected.

Laiolo is confident he can obtain the necessary 575 signatures — 10 percent of the registered voters who reside in the city limits — by the end of the month.

"We're going to go pretty much door-to-door. I don't think we'll be in front of the post office or anything. I don't thing we'll need it," Laiolo told the Pine Cone/Outlook yesterday.

Laiolo has until the end of August to obtain the signatures. Supporters of the initiative could speed the legal process by obtaining the signatures earlier.

If the required number of signatures is verified by the Monterey County registrar of voters, the city council will have to place the question of Piccadilly Park on the ballot.

City Administrator Douglas Schmitz said the issue would probably not be placed on the ballot until July of 1984.

However if initiative supporters gather the signatures of 15 percent (863) of the registered voters, then the council must order a special election to be held within 103 days after the signatures are verified, Schmitz said.

A special election would cost about $6,000, Schmitz added,

Laiolo heads a group of five citizens who have been active in the anti-Piccadilly Park movement. The other members are Florence Berry, Audrey McCarthy, Florence Josselyn and Dorothy Chapman.

Opponents claim that the council did not fully disclose how much it would cost to buy the park when an advisory vote was ordered in 1979. After a 801-624 vote supported purchase of the park, the council paid $400,000 for the site in 1980.

•

OPPONENTS OF the park told the council Tuesday night that times have changed and costs have escalated. The most recent landscape design would cost the city an estimated $135,000.

"The public was not aware of how much money the project would cost," Laiolo told the council.

Laiolo said the answer to the Piccadilly Park question lies at the ballot box.

"The only fair way to know is at the ballot box," he told the council at its March 15 meeting.

"We need full disclosure of the costs of the park. Since then (1980) the costs have doubled and maybe even tripled," said Alan Williams, chairman of the Carmel Citizens Committee. The committee in January presented the council with a 142-signature petition that requested another election. The request was denied.

"You have the right to ask the question again. I think it behooves you to do this to maintain harmony in the community," Williams told the council Tuesday. "The council should get along with positive things instead of driving a wedge in the community."

The Carmel Citizens Committee will sponsor several town meetings so that "all sides to the issue can be aired" before the election, Williams promised.

Councilman Robert Stephenson, a longtime opponent of the park, argued that it's time to allow the voters to take another look at the fate of Piccadilly Park.

"Time has gone by. Prices have escalated. It's a different situation. It's a whole new ballgame," he said.

But Councilwoman Helen Arnold holds another position.

"Times have indeeed changed — they have gotten worse," she said. "We have more congestion, more traffic and more parking problems."

Mrs. Arnold pointed out that Carmel is "internationally known" for its strong environmental positions and opposition to the proliferation of development.

"If we don't take this opportunity to make a park when we have the chance, we"ll be the laughingstock of the country," she said.

The city has already paid for the park. If the economic crunch becomes unbearable, the city could always sell the property later, she pointed out.

"If we sell it now, make no mistake about it, there will be commercial development. Once it's developed, it's lost forever," she said.

Carol Stratton, civic leader of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club, said the organization fully supports development of the site as a park.

In addition, the club has pledged $1,000 toward the landscaping cost of the park if it is developed, she told the council.

Councilman David Maradei, who has supported the park in the past, said he did not want to overturn the 1979 advisory vote. Instead, opponents should go through the initiative process, he said.

"I think the legislative channel of the initiative is the proper channel," he said.

Maradei, who was elected to the council in 1982, said he voted for the purchase of Piccadilly Park on the 1979 advisory ballot.

Selling the park site will only bring more commercial development downtown, which will lead to increased parking and traffic problems, Maradei said.

Maradei said it is "preposterous" to think of the park only in terms of "dollars and cents."

But Maradei admitted that the Piccadilly Park question has divided the community.

"It's a close call in the community and I recognize that," he said.

Barbershop chorus to perform

The Quota Club of Carmel, a chapter of the international women's service organization, will sponsor a fund-raising dinner concert with the Monterey Peninsula Cypressaires Barbershop Chorus and quartets with no host cocktails scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 19 at Portuguese Hall on Casanova Street in Monterey.

A full spaghetti dinner will be served at 8 p.m. Banjo Ben will perform at intermission and there will be door prizes and a raffle.

The Monterey Peninsula Chapter, Cypressaires, is one of 780 chapters throughout the United States and Canada that make up the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Inc. There are over 38,000 members in this world's largest singing organization. The local chapter has 60 members and plans to expand each year.

The Cypressaires were chartered in 1956 and have been active since that time. Together with its women's auxiliary, The Grace Notes, the chapter holds frequent social and recreational activities during the year.

The Society has an international service project, the Institute of Logopedics in Wichita, Kansas. The institute deals with the afflictions which inhibit normal speech in adults and children. Over four million dollars have been raised by the Society for the institute under the motto: "We sing that they shall speak."

Music director Gene Smith has been active in barbershop singing since 1956. He sang tenor in the popular "Plus Fours" quartet that entertained audiences in the far west and Hawaii for nine years. He has led the Cypressaires Chorus to competition at the district level in October 1982 at Pasadena, as well as numerous performances in the Monterey Peninsula area. He encourages all men over the age of 16 who like to sing to join the Cypressaires. The members range in age from 16 to 86 and are bound together by their love for four-part harmony.

Tickets for the dinner and concert are $12.50 and are available at the Record Cove in Monterey or by phone at 624-4697. Proceeds will benefit those with hearing and speech impairments.

Restaurant plans killed

The Carmel Planning Commission, which has long advocated fewer restaurants, received some good news March 16.

Harry Domash announced he will abandon plans to open a full-service restaurant in the site once occupied by Cafe au Lait, north side of Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets.

An application to change the exterior of the Cafe au Lait building was expected to be approved by planners.

Domash and partner Norma Black will move their adjacent Game Gallery business into the Cafe Au Lait site, which is about 50 percent larger than the retail space they now occupy.

"We've been very cramped in our current space. The only way we can move something in is to move something else out," Domash told the Pine Cone/Outlook March 9.

The Game Gallery will not expand its inventory, but merely "offer more of what we already have" Domash said.

The move is expected to begin around May 1 and take just a few days, Domash said.

The current Game Gallery space to a retail shop "that is consistent with what the commission views as a locally-oriented business," he added.

Domash originally applied for a use permit to expand Cafe Au Lait to a full-service restaurant. Under the former ownership, the restaurant had only offered light breakfasts and lunches.

However, the land use committee of the planning commission opposed the plan because of the city-enacted moratorium on new or expanded tourist-oriented businesses, such as art galleries, gift shops and restaurants.

The application was originally scheduled to be reviewed by commissioners in late February, but Domash asked for a continuance to study his plan further.

Early last week he submitted his new application to move the Game Gallery, which has been open on Ocean Avenue for about 18 months.

Gymnasts win

Nancy Penn and Jennifer Johnson, members of the Rising Star Gymnastics Training Center Class 1V team, captured top all-around honors in their divisions at a meet in Pleasanton last week.

Nancy, competing in the ages 12 to 14 division, placed first on the uneven bars, second on the balance beam and third in the vault and floor exercise events.

Jennnifer, competing in the ages nine to 11 age division, placed first in the vault and balance beam events, third on the uneven bars, and fifth in the floor exercise.

In addition, Heide Poehlman, competing in the ages nine to 11 division, tied for seventh in the balance beam event.

The Carmel-based team competed against teams from Pleasanton, San Ramon and Sacramento.

SMALL LOTS WERE SOLD

Tent lots, sold in Pacific Grove in 1875, fetched a price of $50 each. Many houses in Pacific Grove were built on the 30-by-60 tent lots and are still standing.

Obituaries

Katherine McGinnis

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove for Katherine Dennis McGinnis of Carmel, a psychiatric social worker and family counselor, who died March 7 at Community Hospital after a period of failing health. She was 62.

Born March 11, 1920 in Los Angeles, she attended Marlborough School in Los Angeles, Bennett College in New York, the University of California at Los Angeles and California State University at Los Angeles, where she received her bachelor's degree. She received her graduate degree in social work at the University of Southern California. She wa a therapist in private practice for 20 years.

She was a member of a research team in brain functions at the California Institute of Technology in the early 1960s.

Survivors include her husband, Kenneth J.; daughter, Carol Allison of Paso Robles; son, Lloyd Mills III of Ridgewood, N.J.; and three granddaughters.

No services were planned. Ashes were to be scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to a charity of the donor's choice.

Helen Denecke

A memorial service, followed by reception, took place March 15 at the Paul Mortuary in Pacific Grove for Helen Louise Denecke, a retired teacher, social worker and hospital director, who died March 12 in her home at Hacienda Carmel. She was 90.

She was born Jan. 20, 1893 in Caspar, Wyo., a member of a pioneer family. She was a graduate of Boise High School and the University of Idaho, where she was a member of Delta Gamma sorority.

She taught at schools in Idaho and Seattle, Wash., and was a social worker in Tuscon, Ariz., New York City and Detroit, Mich. She moved to the peninsula in 1952 after her retirement as director of Sigma Gamma Children's Hospital in Detroit.

Survivors include a sister, Gertrude D. Hays of Boise; several nieces and nephews and many grandnieces and grandnephews.

The Rev. Dwight Edwards officiated at the services which were followed by cremation at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea. Inurnment was to take place at Pioneer Cemetery in Boise.

Contributions to the donor's favorite charity are preferred by relatives.

Donors registered

Ninety-one potential volunteer donors, including 20 first-time donors, were registered at the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross blood mobile March 10.

Nine citizens also reached landmarks for blood donations. Dorothy Little, Annie Nelson and Jo M. Jennings have now donated one gallon. Reaching the two gallon mark were Douglas Despard, Charles Walton and Jane Strauch.

The three gallon donation mark was reached by David Banks, Joan Stevenson and Sandy Ann Till.

CV Community Chapel accepts new pastors

The Rev. Anne Swallow and Rev. Jean Paul Boudoin conducted their call service Sunday, March 13, at the Carmel Valley Community Chapel. A meeting was held after the service and their call was voted upon by chapel members and accepted. Their leadership of the church will begin in September.

The young married couple was educated at the Yale Divinity School and both are ordained ministers. Reverend Swallow has served as associate minister at the San Carlos United Church of Christ and Reverend Boudoin, who also has a Ph.D. in clinical psychology, has served as youth minister.

Father Farrell's wisdom

Are we bigots?

CARMEL ROTARY, LA PLAYA HOTEL

Noel Sullivan was a kindly man who was descended from two of the old San Francisco families. He lived in Carmel Valley where the Carmel Valley Manor has been built. He also gave the chapels to the Carmelite Monasteries here and at Santa Clara.

He told me that many years ago on a cold and rainy night he picked up a young hitchhiker on Highway 101 outside San Francisco, who was bound for Los Angeles. Noel usually turned off at Prunedale but he drove to Salinas and bought the young man a bus ticket to Los Angeles.

During the drive, the young man told Noel that all the evils of America were caused by Catholics, Jews and blacks and that he was going to join the Ku Klux Klan. On parting, Noel said: "The man who gave you a lift and bought your bus ticket is a Catholic, my father, a Jew and my mother, a black — God bless you."

Daniel O'Connell once said in the British House of Commons: "Bigotry has no head and cannot think; no heart and cannot feel. When she moves it is in wrath; she pauses in the midst of ruin; she prays not but curses; she communes only with death."

How much of Archie Bunker's philosophy is in our lives? An honest examination might surprise us. Amen.

Know your entitlements under Medicare medical insurance. For example, Medicare will pay for diagnostic tests performed by an independent laboratory if that laboratory is certified by Medicare for the specific services you require. It can also pay for transportation by ambulance if the ambulance, equipment and personnel meet Medicare's standards and if ambulance transportation is necessary for the patient's health. But Medicare will not pay for ambulance transportation between your home and a doctor's office.

After an extensive study of how our nation treats aging, Newsweek magazine recently summarized the conclusions of its research this way: "There is no law that propels us into decline after 65. Not only are Americans living longer, they are staying active longer — and their worst enemy is not nature, but the myths and prejudices about growing old."

Peters says CV Ranch has 'vested right' to water been allowed to annex to the Cal-Am service area until the Tularcitos aquifer is tested.

The water appropriation to the ranch by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and the Cal-Am annexation granted by the water management district sparked such anger that the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association last month agreed to ask attorneys whether the public welfare has been abrogated to the degree that either public entity should be sued.

CVPOA Director Robert Greenwood told the association March 9 that a team of environmental attorneys from San Francisco has not yet determined whether the association has a case.

He said the attorneys have been asked to determine also whether they believe the board of supervisors legally granted a use permit for the 100-unit lodge while development in the rest of Carmel Valley has come to a court-ordered halt while the Carmel Valley Master Plan is under revision.

Greenwood's announcement came after Peters' two-hour explanation of the allocation process.

Peters is identified with the issue in every way possible. He is both a Monterey County supervisor and a water management district director. He also ran into legal problems two years ago when Monterey County District Attorney William Curtis accused him of conflict of interest with Carmel Valley Ranch developers when he served on the Monterey County Planning Commission. He was cleared of those charges in Monterey County Superior Court.

So Peters walked onto rather shaky ground last week when he approached the property owners' association.

Peters told the association there was "no question" the planning commission wanted ranch developers to "pursue" the Tularcitos aquifer when the commission drafted a "specific plan" for the ranch in 1977.

In fact, former Monterey County Planning Commissioner Eleanor Taylor wrote a letter to the board of supervisors that said the ranch development should be conditional on the testing of the aquifer. "And I concurred," said Peters.

•

BUT WHEN THE board of supervisors considered the specific plan later that year, Peters said, it opened the possibility of allowing the ranch to use Cal-Am water. When asked to elaborate its position in 1979, the board agreed that the ranch could either develop a water source from the aquifer or tie into Cal-Am, he said.

The Monterey County Superior Court, in a case presented by attorney Richard Rosenthal for Harry Holt, upheld that decision, along with the "vested right" of the ranch to development, Peters told CVPOA directors.

Some CVPOA members said they don't remember that the superior court issued any findings of law in the Holt case. "It's the recollection of everybody that it was thrown out on a technicality," said Dalsemer after the meeting.

Ramos, who represented the county in the Holt case, said the court ruled for the county because Holt waited too long to sue.

Association Director Al Eisner told Peters he was "shocked" that the supervisor would use that court case as a reason to uphold the specific plan. "Carmel Valley Ranch got everything it wanted in the specific plan and we all thought the specific plan could be changed," Eisner said.

Peters responded that the developers have spent money to build a special sewage treatment plant on their property and have set aside money for improvements to the intersection of Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads with the understanding that they could proceed with their development as outlined in the specific plan.

Peters responded that the developers have spent money to build a special sewage treatment plant on their property and have set aside money for improvements to the intersection of Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads with the understanding that they could proceed with their development as outlined in the specific plan.

Attorney Rosenthal, contacted by the Pine Cone/Outlook after the meeting, said the commitments made by ranch developers were conditioned on prior approvals for development already completed.

"The commitment was not that unilateral," Peters said. "As far as the county is concerned, it is a clear-cut, black and white situation."

On the other hand, incremental projects that lead up to total buildout of the ranch development are still subject to environmental and public safety standards, Peters said.

For instance, Peters said, if an environmental assessment of phase seven of the Carmel Valley Ranch project shows that the subdivision would be located on unstable ground, that finding "is not invalidated by the specific plan."

Nevertheless, Eisner told Peters his presentation "comes as a shock to me. I'm astounded."

•

PETERS NOTED, however, that no decision, plan or map for any project is ever binding until "wood is sticking out of the ground."

After Peters concluded his presentation and left the meeting, Eisner suggested that transcripts of his speech be sent to the attorneys who are looking into the Carmel Valley Ranch situation for CVPOA.

The rest of the association agreed with Director Jerry Foote, however, that it would be unfair to send the transcripts to attorneys without Peters' permission. "Bill was not told he was making a deposition when he came here," she said.

Director Richard Abbott said he found "nothing irrational or surprising by the remarks made" by Peters. He said he can understand why the board of supervisors believes it has an obligation to Carmel Valley Ranch not to "pull the rug out from under them" after ranch developers set aside money for the intersection and built the sewage treatment plant.

"Al may be speaking for himself, but he is certainly not speaking for me," Abbott said.

"I agree with Mr. Abbott about not pulling the rug out from under someone after a commitment has been made," Greenwood said. "And that's why we feel the way we do about Carmel Valley Ranch. We feel the rug has been pulled out from under us."

Peters told the Pine Cone/Outlook he is "happy to have the issue reviewed." He said he plans to send a copy of the recording made of his CVPOA address to the county counsel for review so questions in the interpretation of the Holt case can be answered.

Rugged rugby rascals to riot in P.B.

THE SILVER ANNIVERSARY of the Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament will begin play at 7 a.m. Saturday, March 19. The tournament is presented by the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees who will be on hand to ensure a good day for all spectators and participants this weekend at Collins Field in Pebble Beach. This is the largest fund-raiser for the Jaycees. Proceeds will benefit the Seaside chapter of the Boys Club of America, the Family Resource Center, Gateway Center and the Special Olympics.

THE ACTION will be fast and furious at Collins Field in Pebble Beach March 19-20 as the silver anniversary of the Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament gets underway.

This event will bring together 32 of the top college and club teams from across the United States and Canada for fast-paced, rugged rugby competition.

Scheduled to appear for the 25th tournament is the Old Blues Rugby Club of San Francisco, seeded number one. In number two spot and 1980 Monterey winners will be James Bay Athletic Association from Victoria, British Columbia, Canada — the oldest rugby club founded in 1886.

Fellow countrymen of British Columbia, the Surrey Beavers, ranked fourth, and defending champions, the Bay Area Touring Sides, ranked sixth, will be among the players which also include past Monterey winners, Stanford and Santa Monica.

One loss as early as the 7 a.m. Saturday starting time will place a team no higher than a 17th place finish, therefore the pressure will be on from sunrise to sunset.

Increasing that pressure will be the black and red of the Louisville Rugby Club from Louisville, Ky., seeded eighth. They may have a chance at victory, for they are winners of the 1982 Indiana Rugby Union Championship, the Sterling Cup, the Derby Tournament and runners-up in the Atlanta Peachtree Tournament.

Other teams participating in the tournament are the Hastings Rugby Club, Old Mission Beach Athletic Club, Mission Rugby Club, San Jose Seahawks, Cal Poly Rugby Club, Los Angeles Rugby Club and U.C. Berkeley.

The Monterey Rugby Club will compete with the Hawaii Harlequin Rugby Club, Colusa County Rugby Club, U.C. Davis,

What the heck is a 'scrum'?

Rugby matches may appear to be carelessly rehearsed riots, but they actually operate by some rules, however liberal. Knowing what's happening, and why, will make the 25th annual Monterey National Rugby Tournament more interesting.

Games are divided into 40-minute halves for championship matches and shorter halves for preliminary games. There is no time out unless a player is downed with a serious injury.

Each 15-man team has eight forwards, a standoff, a "scrum" half, four three-quarter backs and a full back. Nobody stands around waiting for some action; it's there all the time.

The object is to kick or carry that ball over the opponent's goal line. A "try" scores three points and is made by carrying the ball over the line and touching it down. This allows a place kick, which, if successful, is called a "goal" and counts two points.

If a player carrying the ball finds himself threatened by an opponent, he can attempt to drop kick while he's in motion. If he makes it, his team gets three points but no conversion.

The referee may call a penalty, allowing the innocent side to place kick, scoring three points. The liberal rules also allow the referee to permit play to continue if the innocent side benefits from an infraction. No matter what, however, the referee is not permitted to change a decision.

There are some other rules. The ball may be kicked, thrown or carried, but it cannot be knocked forward with a hand or arm. Players whose team has the ball must remain behind the ball carrier. Players not carrying the ball may not be tackled.

Sometimes there is an unintentional infraction. Then the "scrum" goes into action to get play going again. The eight forwards on each team form three lines facing each other. When the ball is tossed between them, everybody swarms in to get his center man in position to kick the ball to the scrum half of his team. It's rugged.

If the ball goes out of bounds, the forwards again line up in two files while a man from the team that wasn't responsible for the out-of-bounds ball tosses it between the two sides. It's called the "touch," although it would not be exaggerating to call it a Donnybrook.

This year's tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday, March 19-20 at Collins Polo Field, Pebble Beach.

Cellist Rosen to perform at Sunset

Cellist Nathaniel Rosen will perform a recital at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 23, in the Sunset Theater, Carmel. The recital is sponsored by the Carmel Music Society.

Rosen gained worldwide recognition when he became the first American cellist to win the Tchaikovsky Competition Gold Medal in 1978. Since then, he has performed in recital and concert with major conductors and orchestras, including the London Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Pittsburgh Symphony.

He began to study the cello in 1954 at the age of six in his native California. At 13, while he participated in the Coleman Chamber Music Auditions (which he won for four consecutive years), Rosen met master cellist Gregor Piatigorsky. Rosen began private studies with him and participated in his master classes. By the age of 22, Rosen had become Piatigorsky's assistant, a post he retained until the master's death in 1976.

Rosen's career continued with informal chamber music sessions with Jascha Heifetz and he also appeared with Heifetz in televised performances. In 1969 he appeared with Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic in a golden anniversary concert. He appeared in a New York debut in 1970 as winner of the Piatigorsky Award of the New York Violoncello Society.

Rosen received a Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music grant which made it possible for him to attend an Alice Tully recital in 1976. He won the first prize in the 1977 Naumburg Cello Competition, which sponsored two more Alice Tully Hall recitals and held first chair positions with the Pittsburgh and the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestras.

Rosen has been closely associated with both traditional and new music. He premiered a work by William Kraft in 1976 which he had commissioned with the help of a Ford Foundation grant and has given the premiere of the Concerto for Cello and Chamber Orchestra by Robert Linn, which was commissioned for Rosen by Neville Marriner, conductor of the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra when Rosen was its principal cellist.

This season, Rosen will make five New York appearances, including a Carnegie Hall recital debut with Jerome Lowenthal and performances with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center and Benny Goodman and a Brahms evening with Yehudi Menuhin at Carnegie Hall.

His recital at Sunset Theater will include the Sonata in D Major by Locatelli, Sonata in A Major, Op. 65 by Beethoven, Suite No. 3 in C Major for unaccompanied cello by Bach, Elegy, Op. 24 by Faure and Variations on a Theme of Rossini by Martinu.

Tickets are available at Bartlett's Music in Carmel, Do Re Mi Music in the Barnyard, Carmel, The Record Cove in Monterey and Lily Walker's Music in Pacific Grove. Prices are $7, $8 and $9. Some student tickets will be available free of charge. For more information, phone the Carmel Music Society at 372-1226.

Two evenings of Irish celebration planned at the Cherry Foundation

The Poetic Drama Institute/Cherry Foundation will present two evenings of Irish celebration with poetry and prose from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. followed by the music of Banish Misfortune, from 9:15 p.m. to 10 p.m., Thursday, March 17 and a concert of Irish music by Banish Misfortune, scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Friday, March 18 at Cherry Hall, located on Guadalupe Street and Fourth Avenue, Carmel.

Members of the Banish Misfortune band are Bruce and Judy Cowan. Bruce is a landscape architect who does freelance horticultural writing and has a column in local publications.

They play a variety of instruments and have played many types of ethnic music including Irish and Mexican tunes. They will play harp, tin whistle, recorder, banjo and accordion.

Another member of the band is Bill Weigle, a 1970 Olympic race-walker, marathon runner, meteorologist and musician. He will play guitar and sing. Robin Keeler, with his wife Terrell, is a marital and divorce counselor and teacher at Cabrillo College. He has played classical music for a number of years. He will play hammered dulcimer and cello.

Mariani Dydik has played folk and ethnic music for many years in the New York and Monterey Peninsula areas. She is a landscape gardner. She will play the tin whistle, recorder and bodrhan (Irish drum).

Patty Pettit has played Irish music in the San Francisco Bay area, classical music with the Berkeley Mandolin Ensemble and Mexican music with the Mariachi Mixtlan de la Bahia de Monterey. She will play violin and mandolin.

Poetry readers include Deirdre Moore and Bill Logan as well as other Peninsula artists. They will read from the works of various Irish authors and will concentrate on the poetry of William Butler Yeats.

Dan Gotch, coordinator of the program, has staged six Irish Galas at the Cherry Foundation. He is artistic director of the Poetic Drama Institute, Cherry Foundation Theatre Project.

There is no admission charge but donations will be appreciated. For more information, phone 624-7491.

Film review:

'Icky' — yet tame

By LISA JENSEN

One Dark Night. With Meg Tilly. Written by Thomas McLoughlin and Michael Hawes. Directed by Thomas McLoughlin. A Com World release. Rated PG.

One Dark Night is like one of those quaint haunted house rides at an amusement park. It's full of icky things jumping out of the dark, but there's nothing in it that would ever traumatize your grandma. This movie is very clean, which is either its major virtue or biggest drawback, depending on your point of view.

What's most notable about One Dark Night is that it's not a mad slasher movie. It's almost a ghost story, except that the villain, although he has definitely shuffled off this mortal coil, is not exactly a ghost. In life, he was Raymar, a controversial scientist branded a "psychic vampire" for feeding off the bioenergy of innocent young (female) victims to maintain his own telekinetic powers. And though his body is clinically dead, his brain is as voracious as ever, sending out destructive psychic impulses from within his marble tomb at the Hollywood Mausoleum.

Where does Raymar intend to find living energy to recharge his little gray cells among the inmates at the Hollywood Mausoleum? On the very first night of his entombment, innocent teenager Julie (Meg Tilly) allows herself to be locked into the marble halls as part of her initiation into a cliquish high school club called The Sisters. Two of the Sisters, blonde, bitchy Carol (Robin Evans) and Kitty (Leslie Speights), her sidekick with an inexplicable toothbrush fetish, break into the place to try to scare Julie off.

Meanwhile, Raymar's estranged daughter, Olivia (Melissa Newman), gets hold of a tape telling her all about her father's horrible experiments. Acting on her own telepathic premonitions, she rushes off the same night for a psychic showdown with her late dad.

Just in time, too, since Raymar's been having a grand time animating all the corpses in the crypt with telekinetic energy and launching their rotting remains through the dark halls in pursuit of the hysterical teenagers.

Too few horror movies stress mood over gratuitous sensationalism, and One Dark Night doesn't contain so much as a single naughty word, let alone any naked coeds or bloodstained cutlery. But its mood is never feverish enough to generate any real suspense. Most of the shocks depend on gruesome make-up effects, and once you've seen one worm-eaten cadaver looming up out of the shadows, you've seen 'em all.

Ex-Batman Adam West appears briefly as Olivia's ineffectual husband. And a hunky kid named David Masor Daniels, a junior varsity Chris Reeve, plays Julie's ineffectua boyfriend. Tilly (who was so good as Matt Dillon's smart-aleck girlfriend in Tex) literally sleepwalks through her part, since Julie is stoned on Demerol most of the time.

In fact, these protagonists generate so little energy (psychic or otherwise), you can't figure out what Raymar wants with them in the first place. When the corpses are livelier than the heroes, you know the movie's in trouble.

Film Gallery schedules comedy

The Film Gallery of Monterey Peninsula College will present the 1944 comedy film, Together Again, at 8 p.m. Friday, March 18 in the Music Hall, Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

The black and white film stars Charles Boyer, Irene Dunne and Charles Coburn in a story about a distinguished lady mayor and her search for a sculptor to redo the statue of her late husband, which is continually demolished by lightning.

Lightning of a different sort soon strikes the mayor. The film is recommended for all the family. General admission is $2. For more information, phone 646-4051.

What's playing at the movies

Creep Show: A comedy horror film with an all star cast of Hal Holbrook, Adrienne Barbeau, Fritz Weaver, Leslie Nielsen, Carrie Nye, E.G. Marshall and Viveca Lindfors. Directed by *Night of the Living Dead*creator George A. Romero. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

Curtains: Action packed suspense thriller starring the king of the stonefaces, Charles Bronson, as L. Kessler. It's his job to track down a psychopathic killer of young women. Also stars Andrew Stevens and Lisa Eilbacher. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Entity: Starring Barbara Hershey, with Ron Silver and David Labiosa, is the story of a woman who experiences the terror of an unknown presence that seems intent on possessing her body as well as her soul. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial: A wonderful movie children and adults will love. The Steven Spielberg film is about a creature from outer space that is stranded on earth. A 10-year-old boy assumes responsibility for E.T's safety while searching for a way to reunite the creature with his own kind. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

GANDHI: A story of the life and times of the great Indian statesman. The young British-Indian actor Ben Kingsley gives a wonderful performance as he shows the transformation of a vain and inarticulate Indian lawyer into the powerful spokesman for non-violence and the moral force behind India's drive for independence. Rated PG. At Cinema 70.

Heavy Metal: An animated film based on the magazine of the same name, a science-fiction/fantasy comic book for adults. Rated R. At the Dream Theatre.

High Road to China: A free-wheeling post World War I action adventure romance about an ex-Army pilot, Tom Selleck, and a spoiled heiress, Bess Armstrong, who face the perils of three continents in search of the young woman's missing father. Rated PG. At the Regency Theatre.

Last American Virgin: Features the music of Blondie, The Cars, The Commodores, Devo, Quincy Jones, Journey, The Police, Reo Speedwagon and Tommy Tutone. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Lords of Discipline: Based on Pat Conroy's best-selling novel about a young man who forges his own personal code of honor in defiance of the very rules of conduct that shaped and nurtured him. It is a story of Will McClean, played by David Keith, who is drawn to protect a fellow cadet against unfair pressure from a secret group at the Carolina Military Institute. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

One Dark Night: A shocking tale of horror when young people are trapped with no way out. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: The cult classic where two teenagers, Brad and Janet, meet Dr. Frankenfurter, a Transylvanian transvestite. Fri. and Sat. midnight show. Rated R. At the Dream Theatre.

Sophie's Choice: Meryl Streep gives an extraordinary performance as a Polish Catholic survivor of Auschwitz, caught up in a last desperate grasp at love with Nathan (Kevin Kline) a bedeviled Brooklyn Jew. Director/writer Alan Pakula exposed the cancer of racism and produced a stunning vision of the loss of innocence in an age of insanity. Rated R. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Ten to Midnight: Stars John Vernon and Samantha Eggar. It is the story of six girls who are invited to a producer's home to test for a major role and one by one they are killed. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

The Man From Snowy River: A gentle and old-fashioned treatment of an Australian hero, Tom Burlinson, who passes into manhood. Kirk Douglas plays two roles, one as the young man's mentor and one as his adversary. Young audiences will enjoy this film. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema.

Sting II: Con man Jackie Gleason stars as the pivotal Gondorff who, while still in the slammer, has conjured up a multiple sting using a boxing scam as a lure for its participants. Mac Davis, Teri Garr, Karl Malden and Oliver Reed co-star in the 40s comedy set in New York at the height of the cafe society. Rated PG. At the Dream Theatre.

Tootsie: A comedy in which Dustin Hoffman portrays an unemployed actor who finds success only when he decides to take on a female persona and wins a soap opera role. Hoffman's characterization is brilliant and believable. This movie gives you a personal look and some of the pain and frustration most actors endure, and an insight to a woman's struggle for equality. Dabney Coleman, Jessica Lange, Teri Garr and Bill Murray make an excellent supporting cast. Rated PG. At the Center Cinema.

Trenchcoat: When aspiring mystery writer Mickey Raymond, played by Margot Kidder, decides to go to Malta to research her next novel, she unwittingly becomes involved in a conspiracy more insidious than any of the imaginary goings-on in her unpublished books. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

The Verdict: A suspenseful courtroom drama involving a hospital malpractice suit, whose outcome could save the career of the plaintiff's attorney. Paul Newman plays the alcoholic, has-been lawyer with nerve-wracking anxiety. A low-key but brilliant performance by Newman. Rated R. At the Golden Bough.

The Year of Living Dangerously: Stars Mel Gibson and Sigourney Weaver. It is a fast-paced romantic adventure set against the background of the cultural upheaval and political intrigue of Indonesia of 1965. Peter Weir directed on locations in Australia and the Phillippines. Rated PG. At the Regency Theatre.

Web of intrigue

MARGOT KIDDER stars as a would-be mystery writer caught in a web of international intrigue in Trenchcoat. The romantic comedy, which co-stars Robert Hays, was filmed on the Mediterranean island of Malta. It is now at the Dream Theatre, 301 Prescott St., Monterey.

Newport Beach Rugby Club, Capitol Rugby Club and the Olde Gaels Rugby Club.

The tournament is sponsored by Michelob in cooperation with Couch Distributing Company, Watsonville — wholesaler for Anheuser-Busch. It is co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees and the Northern California Rugby Football Union, Inc. As members of the tournament staff, the Jaycees are in charge of the fields, concessions, beer, tickets, medical aid, publicity, the VIP tent, program advertising, program and sales and comptroller. The Northern California Rugby Union handles team invitations, referees and tournament play.

The Jaycees donate a major portion of the proceeds to youth development through the Boys' Club of America and the Special Olympics for Retarded Children. The NorthernCalifornia Rugby Football Union uses its share of funds raised to support its many activities such as Youth and Mini Rugby, "rep" side teams, Women's rugby and Northern California regional needs.

•

RUGBY CHAIRMAN Geoffry Hampton, a member of the Jaycees for eight years and chairman of the tournament for the past four years, calls this tournament the most prestigious in the world.

"There are no other tournaments in other countries and this is the oldest rugby tournament in the world. We have some of the best referees who come from all over for this tournament," Hampton said.

The work of the Jaycees begins Thursday, March 17. The field chairman and the substaff of the Jaycees will set up the pitches (the playing fields), fences for security, the scoreboard and the bleachers. On Friday they will set up the concession stands which include hot dogs, teriyaki steak, sandwiches, coffee and beer. That evening there will be a dinner in honor of the union officials and at 7 a.m. Saturday, 32 teams will play five games each on four pitches throughout the length of the day.

On Sunday play will begin at 7 a.m. with final and championship games due to start about 2 p.m. Before the final game, which determines first and second place winners, will be the now famous "running drop kick" championships.

Jeffrey Means, a member of the Jaycees for the past year who is in charge of program advertising and sales for the tournament, explained the "running drop kick" exhibition as a test of skill by various kickers on the teams who vie for that one honor among the more than 400 team players at the tournament.

The tournament started 25 years ago when Paul "Boomer" Andrew, a Cal football alumnus and quarterback at the 1952 Rose Bowl, brought rugby to neutral Central California, at King City, to decide a Northern and Southern California playoff. The tournament continued when 11 teams turned out the next year and it was later moved to Carmel Middle School. In the early 60s, when the Jaycees began to co-sponsor the event, the tournament was moved to Pebble Beach.

An exciting spectator sport, rugby, according to Sports Illustrated, has grown tenfold in popularity in the past decade. With this in mind, the Jaycees envision more than 10,000 people in attendance this weekend and look forward to substantial support of youth projects.

"After all," Means added, "we do enjoy putting the tournament together, we have fun while we're hard at work and we believe in our Jaycee creed: service to humanity is the best work of life."

Tickets at $5 per day, $9 for the weekend may be purchased on the days of the tournament at the Highway One entrance to Pebble Beach as well as at the Collins Field located on Stevenson Drive in Pebble Beach.

Lofty endeavor for the city

By RICHARD TYLER

DURING RECENT years in work-conscious, sports-conscious America, an apparent distance has existed between people and "the arts." In terms of perceptions (if not always reality), artists and art activities have been associated with the diverse, sometimes eccentric, world of the city.

The usual small town share of "the arts" has been expressed through the local piano teacher, the high school band, or painting groups. The media have tended to focus on artistic events little understood by the majority of Americans — for example, Christo's 25-mile white nylon fence imposed on the rural California landscape a few years ago.

At the same time, small towns and rural areas have been recognized as the source of strong indigenous art traditions and craftsmanship such as award-winning county fair quilts, "primitive" artists using rural themes, musical styles such as bluegrass, or Indian pottery and weaving in the Southwest. While there is evidence of a nationwide renewal of the arts and indication that narrow distinctions between "art" and everyday life are being broadened, small towns and rural areas generally have failed to take advantage of the potentials available in the artist's way of viewing the world.

Because the arts relate to the perceptive and emotional aspects of human nature as well as to principles of structure and rationality, they may bring people together in common spirit and activity in ways mundane pursuits cannot do.

A distinction may be made between creative artistic production on the one hand and appreciation of varied art fields on the other. Further, emphasis can be placed on artistic efforts which encourage the individual's creative role or on those which emphasize community participation. If people actively participate in the arts, appreciative consciousness is certain to increase, and a town which supports individual creativity will strengthen community activity as well. Development of artistic sensitivity in evaluation of what we see, hear and read ultimately can lead to greater intolerance of ugliness in small towns and to better rural landscapes and more attractive community environments.

Rural areas have been pictured as the source of artistic activity because of the direct inspiration of nature. Poets, painters, composers and craftsmen have drawn spiritually and materially from nature by re-expressing sunsets, canyons, and falling leaves through local clay, wood, pigments, and wool. Small towns have the potential for greater stimulation from the natural world.

On the other hand, the pragmatic trend of thinking in some small towns has tended to see arts developments as "frill" rather than as a necessary aspect of human endeavor. Carmel was first populated by a group of artists who found the local environment very conducive to creative production. Throughout its growth, Carmel has been known as a center for the arts. It has nurtured the artist and has developed its cultural programming to a plateau far beyond that of the "small town" status.

At a time when the nation is realizing a shift in the public regard for art — from viewing it as a needless luxury to seeing art as a vital aspect of community life — Carmel cannot lessen its devotion and commitment.

Many more "small towns" are beginning to react to the demand for a more involved cultural life and a network of community concerts meets the needs of the smaller budget. More professional companies plan their tour schedules to include the smaller town for the audiences available are more sophisticated and knowledgeable.

Dance companies — the largest single growing art in the country — plan week-long, in-residence programs in many rural areas. Major artists perform in towns that would otherwise never have a chance to participate in such activities. To say that cultural activity is a luxury holds little credence, for it is the culture of a people that allows us to know the type of existence of a community.

I would not hesitate to say that if Carmel is to be remembered for one human endeavor, it must be the attention we gave to improve and enrich our cultural existence.

Theater review

Thrilling 'thriller,' unfunny comedy

By SHIRLEEN HOLT

THE STUDIO Theater presented the Monterey Peninsula premiere of Deathtrap Friday night. A brilliantly conceived play by Ira Levin, Deathtrap is a thriller that combines suspense, mystery and an abundance of humor.

The setting is the Connecticut home of Sidney and Myra Bruhl. Handcuffs, knives and guns adorn the walls as well as several posters of Sidney's past theatrical accomplishments. A frustrated playwright, Sidney hasn't had a success in years. He desparately needs a triumph and finds one when a young playwright (Clifford) presents Sidney a thriller he has written called Deathtrap.

Sidney devises a scheme to eliminate the young writer and claim the script as his own, much to the terror of his wife, Myra, who suffers palpitations and a severe heart condition.

Of course the puzzle doesn't end there. We soon discover that a fake murder is staged in order to promote a fatal heart attack for Myra. This succeeds and Clifford moves in with Sidney. Yes folks, they are gay and in love. But we find that love does not conquer all. The plot thickens and the suspense continues.

The premiere is a successful one. Of course Deathtrap suffered the usual opening night roughness. The pacing was a bit off and the blocking stagnant and awkward at times. However, these are things that will soon correct themselves as the actors adjust to the audience and become comfortable in their roles.

Rod Allison's Sidney is relaxed and convincing. Not only does he look like a writer, he has a likeable quality, even in his most menacing moments. Allison has a wonderful feel for comedy. He points out the humor subtly and naturally without overemphasizing or mugging. Though at times his movements are stiff (this could be due to poor staging), when the moment arises he handles the action scenes beautifully.

Nita Raichart as Myra doesn't quite compare. We keep waiting to see the real Myra — the kind of woman Sidney would marry. Raichart's flat performance conveys little shock that the man she married is a murderer, or that her terror could lead to a heart attack.

As the young playwright Clifford, Fred Holmes gives a natural, but perhaps a bit too understated performance. He handles the role of innocent writer well but when the mood shifts and he becomes a threat to his lover, Sidney, no real sense of power or capability is conveyed.

Florence Larsen is delightful as Helga Ten Dorp, the scatterbrained psychic who predicts the deaths in the house. And Scott Mattraw's country lawyer, Porter Milgrim, is pleasant and believeable.

Deathtrap plays Thursday through Saturday nights at The Studio Theater in Carmel.

MONTEREY PENINSULA College opened a revival of the Restoration comedy Wild Oats last Thursday. It might have been better to leave it buried.

Written by English playwright John O'Keefe, Wild Oats is another of those plays centered on mistaken identities, silly foibles and intricate plots and subplots — the type of comedy that appealed greatly to 18th Century audiences. Not so now. Other famous writers of the Restoration period, while they offered the popular ribald humor, also created plays strong in characterization and plot. O'Keefe relies solely on the action, and as a result, his characters are dull and his plots muddled.

Despite valiant efforts by director Morgan Stock to create interesting staging, the play begins on a monotonous plane and never quite peaks. Though the acting is energetic enough, there is no focus or unity to the production. One waits for the action to start and the fun to begin.

Bill Dodge is the show's saving grace. As Rover, the actor/suitor posing as the son of wealthy nobleman Sir George Thunder, Dodge melodramatically bandies Shakespearean quotes as would a swordsman in a fencing tournament. Adding life and vibrancy to some of the more stagnant scenes, Dodge provides many of the play's truly comic moments.

Rich Hughett as Sir George Thunder and Bill Lindsay as John Dory both play their parts energetically and convincingly. However Rachel MacKenzie Cook as the Quaker Lady Amaranth is a bit too reserved, her character devoid of any personality or life (another fault of a poor script).

As the fat Farmer Gammon, Dick Vreeland adds a bid of humor as he struts around with his wig askew. And Rodney Chutney does a fine job as the real son of Sir George Thunder.

Special mention should also be given to Phil Pratt as the lecherous Ephraim Smooth. Though he has a relatively small part, I found myself fully enjoying each scene in which he appears. Pratt has a wonderful face that lends itself fully to comedic charaterization.

Julie Kennedy is admirable as the mistress Jane. She adds a nice spunk and sauciness to her character.

The costumes, designed by Constance Gamiere are authentic and beautifully done.

Final performances of Wild Oats are tonight (March 17), Friday and Saturday nights. Tickets can be obtained by calling the MPC Theater box office.

Management aphorisms

By JEAN THURMAN

The One Minute Manager* by Kenneth Blanchard, Ph.D. and Spencer Johnson, M.D. (William Morrow and Company, Inc.) $12.95. 111 pages.

The book proclaims itself with a gold seal on the front cover to be "a gem"; small, expensive and invaluable. At $12.95 for a mere 111 pages, it is indeed expensive, but it may be the most frequently used management resource you ever buy. Companies such as Holiday Inn, 7-Eleven and Burger King have bought copies for their key personnel. The inside covers are lined with praises for The One Minute Manager.

The book is written in the form of an allegory. A young man goes in search of the perfect manager, and after much fruitless searching finds our hero, the "One Minute Manager." The story is simple and fun; no management book has ever been easier to read. It takes easily less than an hour from cover to cover.

The sentences are short and snappy. Many pages contain but a single aphorism, such as: "Help people reach their full potential. Catch them doing something right," or "We are not just our behavior. We are the person managing our behavior."

The book is studded with such aphorisms. The One Minute Manager has them engraved on plaques on his desk and walls, and refers to them when he wants to make a point.

The authors' message is not complicated. They describe current business practices. "That's what's wrong with most businesses today. Their people really do not produce — either quantity or quality." And this is largely because the typical employee's main motivation is the avoidance of punishment. The easiest way to avoid doing something wrong is not to do anything. The solution is to motivate people through goal setting, praisings and reprimands. Don't go overboard with being people oriented or results oriented, but be "tough and nice."

The rest of the book is just expanding and reviewing the three major concepts of one minute management: one minute goal setting, one minute praisings and one minute reprimands. The idea is to have people understand what is expected of them, encourage them when they succeed and eliminate incorrect behavior.

The One Minute Manager says this is not manipulative because you let people know what you are going to be doing, and why. Soon they will be setting their own goals, doing their own praisings and their own reprimands. They will be managing themselves, with minimal effort on the manager's part.

The authors have a positive attitude towards people. They value their employees as a major investment and as their most important resource. They want their people happy and productive. Their happiness increases their productivity and their productivity increases their happiness.

Blanchard and Johnson have drawn upon Pavlovian psychology, animal training and child behavior studies, among other sources, to develop their theories. They have as broad an application. The ideas can be applied to parenting, education and personal development as well as personnel management.

All of the major points are supported by examples and backed up by repetition and summary. There is no chance of skipping over an important idea. If you miss it the first time, you'll get it the second or third.

Yet with all this repetition, it never gets boring. The book can and should be read over and over, lent out, and given away. The One Minute Manager is glad to share his management secrets with you, and asks only that you "share it with others."

Free health program on arthritis

A free workshop to help people understand and cope with arthritis will be offered from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. Saturday, March 19 in the main conference room at Community Hospital.

Arthritis — What Is It? is the title of the program and it is open to the public on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Panelists will include: Michael Pick, M.D., a rheumatologist, who will discuss medical aspects and treatment; Paul James, M.D. an orthopedic specialist, who will talk about surgical intervention; Nancy Malinowski, chief physical therapist, who will explain the role of physical therapy; Karol Orr, occupational therapist, who will cover joint protection and assistive devices and Janice Harrell, chief dietitian, who will discuss diet facts and fads.

Ticket dilemmas of concert groups

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

YOU WOULD THINK that anyone with good news would want to spread it around. But for the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association and the Salinas Concert Association — two of the oldest concert organizations in Monterey County — the good news, in all its obviousness, is a little embarrasing.

After 42 years for the former association, and 45 for the latter, anyone can now buy a ticket at the the door for an individual concert.

But while it is now possible to buy individual tickets, neither organization has been uninhibited about announcing it. The MPCA adopted this new policy for the current season but has made no real public noise about it. And even the brochure which describes the SCA's coming 1983-84 season says plainly that no individual tickets will be sold at the door.

The dilemma about selling individual tickets is, for both groups, something of an identity crisis. Both associations were originally chartered for subscription-only sales, as is true for a dozen similar Northern California groups. It was a conservative guarantee that tied art to the economics of popular taste. The number of subscriptions sold during an annual drive produced only and all the money available for the next season.

Fewer subscriptions meant either fewer concerts or less expensive artists. No tickets were to be sold at the door, though season subscriptions traditionally have been sold quietly to anyone who wanted to join the season in progress.

The problems of this approach were several, though none was life-threatening so long as word of mouth carried the tradition forward. In the first place, many concert attractions have played to poor houses. Many artists in the MPCA season, for example, have played to audiences of no more than 300, even though the association claims 800 members, and even though the hall of choice — the Pacific Grove Middle School auditorium — seats close to 900. The other half of this problem is publicity. Since no tickets could be sold at the door, the local media have been reluctant to promote the concerts individually.

The relative lack of excitement under these circumstances and the short and often under-promoted annual subscription drives have resulted in seasons that have offered a provincial mixture of everything from joke-telling light-show organists, to string quartets, to folkloric dance revues, to jazz combos, to opera singers.

And perhaps worthy of closer scrutiny is the fact that virtually all of the attractions in all the many concert associations of this type and of this charter are now signed through a single agency, Lauritzen Concert Services of San Mateo.

While Lauritzen's business can be no mystery, there does exist the temptation to package weaker artists within the roster of good ones and to put the local concert associations of Monterey County at a disadvantage in competition for audiences with other, more "public" concert organizations.

On the other hand, the cost to the subscriber has remained quite low and the attractions are generally quite good, if lacking continuity. More often than not our two concert associations offer the best concert bargains in town.

The 800 members of the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association pay $15 for a one-year adult subscription to five concerts. The rate for full-time students of any age is $6. The MPCA has, therefore, a budget of about $10,000 — most of which goes for artists' fees.

•

THE SALINAS Concert Association has a membership in excess of 1,400 with an adult ticket at $20 and a student ticket of $10. The budget of about $25,000 buys five concerts which are staged at 1,600-seat Sherwood Hall.

Audiences for the SCA are generally substantial and typically match or exceed the average 900 who attend the Monterey County Symphony at Sherwood Hall, and which include increasing numbers of subscribers from Carmel Valley, Hollister and other areas some distance from Salinas.

Both organizations are in the middle of their annual subscription drives. The Salinas Association will officially end its drive tomorrow, March 18, though late-comers will not be turned away. The Monterey Peninsula Concert Association has extended its drive to the end of March. For the first time in its history the Salinas group has already confirmed its entire 1983-84 season ahead of its brochure.

It will include the Bill Snyder Trio (popular music and jazz), the "Story of Gilbert and Sullivan" with a 13-member troupe of singers and instrumentalists, Bayanihan (a large Filipino dance company), the Harvey Pittel Saxophone Quartet, and a cello and piano program by Yehuda Hanani and James Dick. Information is available from Anne Harder at 758-5027.

The MPCA has so far booked the piano duo, Stecher and Horowitz, and international violinist Robert McDuffie. Three other attractions are still being fixed. Information is available from Mrs. Constance Callas at 375-8806.

While ghosts from the origins of these organizations still tramp about, both independently have decided to sell what they describe as "scholarship" tickets at the door. A scholarship donation, therefore, has become the vehicle for individual concert entry for those who do not want to subscribe to the entire season.

In Salinas the scholarship tickets are $10 each, obviously no bargain for anyone who attends more than two programs. But the cause is worthy. That money, and the money raised by selling refreshments at intermissions, is given to high school music students who continue their music studies in college. The program was started last year and already has proved very successful.

Scholarship tickets in Pacific Grove are only $5, and the monies raised have been used to buy tickets for school students to attend series concerts. That plan was instigated this season and its results at gaining new audience are still too new to assess.

It seems both organizations are perhaps a little anxious that tickets easily obtained at the door may threaten the annual subscriptions that have been their economic mainstays and, indeed, their survival. Perhaps that should be a real concern. Subscriptions for other arts organizations have been down in the last two seasons.

Despite the attraction that membership is one of the two groups guarantees free admission to the concerts of the other, the concert associations might find themselves faced with the need to become more competitive for audiences, to not depend so heavily on word of mouth, and to shop among other agencies for artists.

Remaining this season for the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association are pianist Mark Westcott tomorrow, March 18, and the Aspen Soloists, a piano trio, on April 11. The Salinas Concert Association will present the New York Vocal Arts Ensemble at Sherwood Hall on April 5.

Don't wait to make the move

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 4-3 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

You're tempted to move "safely" from your 10-point to your 3-point. The trouble is that you're safe from only one move. For the next five or six rolls Black will be improving his home board; and if you get hit you'll have a terrible time getting in and out of his board.

It is better to take risks now than to wait until Black's board is better. Bring two men down from your midpoint, making the 10-point and leaving a blot on your 9-point.

Black can hit only with a five or a 4-1, 13 shots out of the 36 possible rolls. If he hits the blot, you have an excellent chance to come in since three points are open in his board; you may hit the blot on his 5-point; or you may get the blot that hit you on the 9-point or the blot that he leaves on your 4-point.

If you don't get hit, you'll have an easier time bringing your men around safely since you'll have a resting place on your 10-point and perhaps also on your 9-point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Jazz ensemble concert

The Monterey Peninsula College Jazz Ensemble will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 23 in the Music Hall at Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

Special guest artist will be Ray Pizzi on the bassoon. He is an acclaimed reedman from Los Angeles who has recorded six albums under his own name, the latest of which is entitled Espressivo. The album was praised by reviewers for its instrumentation, expression and mastery of his instruments.

In 1981 Pizzi played a special bassoon concerto directed and written expressly for him by Henry Mancini. He has also been praised by some of the most respected jazz musicians in the country, including Dizzy Gillespie.

The National Academy of Arts and Sciences awarded Pizzi "Most Valuable Player" in 1980. He was also a contributor to the series of free jazz concerts at the Ford Theatre, presented by the Los Angeles County Music and Performing Arts Commission, in 1982.

Admission to the concert is $2. For more information, phone 646-4207.

Piano concert on Beethoven sonatas

William Corbett-Jones continues his concert series dedicated to Beethoven's entire 32 piano sonatas at 4:30 p.m. Friday, March 18, in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

Corbett-Jones will accompany each program with a talk on the life and personality of Beethoven and the cultural, social and political conditions in Europe in his lifetime. He will also discuss the musical aspects of each of the sonatas.

Corbett-Jones is professor of music at San Francisco State University and has performed worldwide. He is known to California audiences for his lecture/recitals on the works of Mozart, Schubert, Chopin and Beethoven.

Tickets are $5 per concert and are available at the door or in advance from the Monterey Peninsula College Community Services office.

Classical music concert

A concert of classical music by Hanni Schmid-Wyss, pianist and Lux Brahn, clarinetist, will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 19 in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

The program will include piano solo pieces by Chopin and Bartok and duo concert pieces for piano and clarinet by Weber, Schumann and Poulenc.

General admission is $4 and advance tickets may be purchased through Monterey Peninsula College Community Services at 646-4051.

SANTA CLARA BARN 32 X 48

GALLERY AMERICANA
Hallmark of excellence in contemporary fine art

Three Owners, Horse & Groom in Paddock, is the title of this painting by Frank Ashley. An exhibit of his latest watercolors will open with a reception for the artist from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday, March 19 at Zantman Art Gallery, located on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street in Carmel.

Epsom Derby artist due for Saturday reception

Frank Ashley will exhibit 46 of his latest watercolors, The 200th Running of the Derby at Epsom, with a reception from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturday, March 19, at Zantman Art Gallery, located on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street, Carmel.

For this exhibit, the artist chose a single historic event because, of all the great racetracks in England, Epsom possesses a certain nostalgic grandeur in its setting and in its elegant old buildings. This provides a perfect background for the people and horses that congregate at these fashionable occasions, according to the artist.

In these powerful watercolors, Ashley captures the exciting atmosphere of the event, the dynamic movement of the race itself and the character of the people in attendance from the handsome aristocrats in formal attire, the elegant British eccentrics to the jockeys in their colorful silks and the racetrack touts and bookies.

The 200th Derby at Epsom was run in the spring of 1979. Since that time, Ashley has worked on this personal record of the event. The product is a collection that has been gathered for this one-man show.

Since his last one-man show at the Zantman Art Galleries in 1979, Ashley has exhibited at the Turf Club, Belmont Race Track, New York and the Aiken, South Carolina Racing Hall of Fame Museum. Later this year, he will go to the famous race at Ascot, England to undertake a large commissioned painting for the California Jockey Club.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. On Sunday the hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. There are two locations on Sixth Avenue in Carmel.

ETCHED OAK is the title of this oil painting by Sam Racina. It is part of the exhibit ~~scheduled to open with an artist's reception~~ from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, March 19, at Miner's Gallery Americana, located on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street in ~~Carmel~~.

Miner's features state 'oils'

Samuel C. Racina IV will exhibit his paintings of the California landscape with a reception from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday, March 19 at Miner's Gallery Americana, located on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street in Carmel.

His oils document the golden hills and green oaks of the rolling California heartland. He uses fine brushes to detail California trees, the green or gold grasses and the skies.

Raised and educated in San Jose, Racina graduated with distinction from San Jose State University in 1975. He has been a professional artist ever since. His large sized canvases have great clarity and depth of focus.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For more information, phone 624-5071.

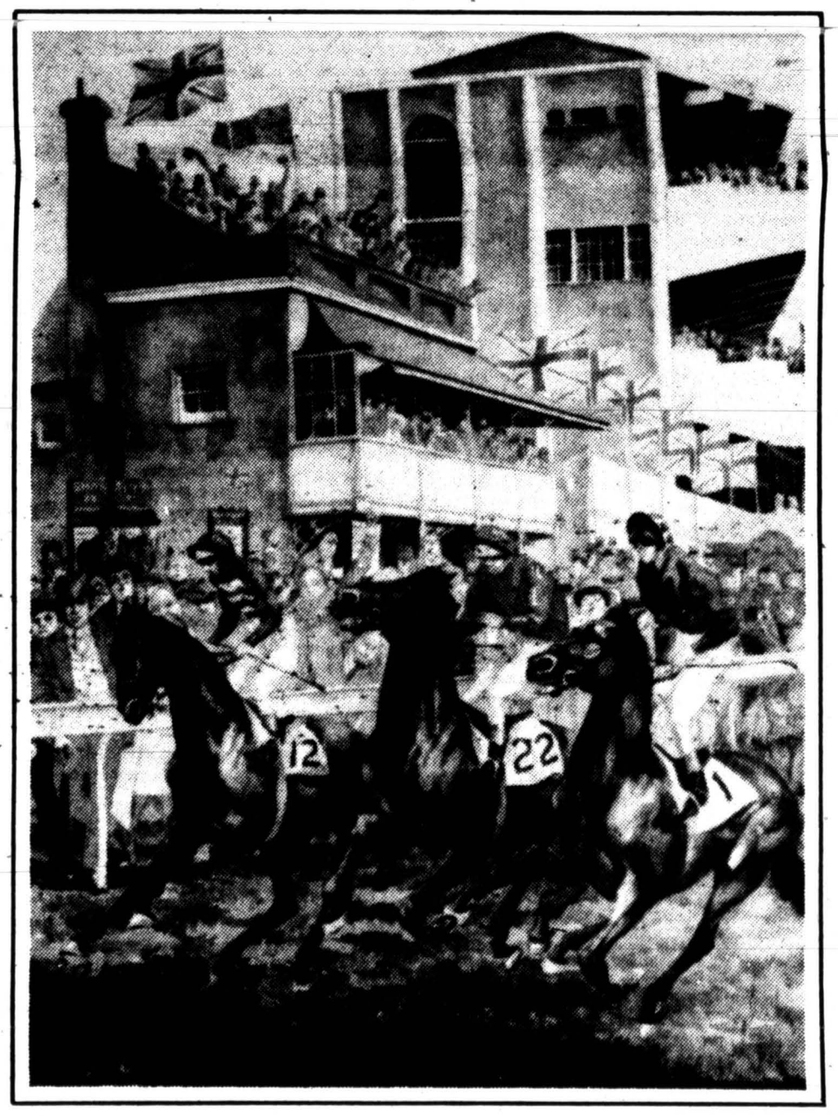
We Proudly Present New Paintings by

FRANK ASHLEY



THREE HORSES, END OF RACE 30 X 22

In this unprecedented show of watercolors by Frank Ashley, the artist has chosen as his theme a single historical event: the 200th Running of the Derby at Epsom. In these brilliant and powerful watercolors, Frank Ashley captures the exciting atmosphere of the event, the dynamic movement of the race itself, and, in an often satirical way, the character of the people in attendance.

The artist will be present at the show opening,
Saturday, March 19, 1983, 5:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.

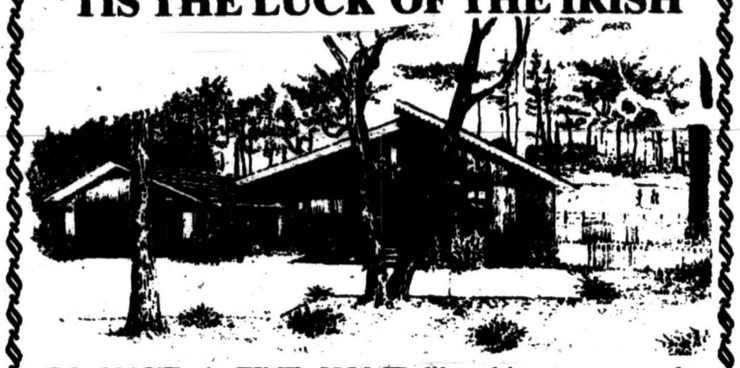
'TIS THE LUCK OF THE IRISH



TO HAVE A FINE HOME like this come on the market, and just in time for St. Patrick's Day, too. This four-year-old home will gladden your eye because of its lovely forest setting on the emerald green 2nd fairway of the Monterey Peninsula Club's Shore Course. The living room, dining room, kitchen, and master bedroom all have views of the golf course. Three bedrooms, two baths. Assumable loan, and the owner may helf finance with reasonable down. $275,000.

NO BLARNEY

THE PRICE of this fine Carmel home has been REDUCED, and we wouldn't be stretching the truth one bit to say it's now an even better value than it was! Within an easy walk of the village, this chalet offers living room with inviting fireplace, warm wood interior, and high beamed ceiling. Three bedrooms, two baths, laundry, garage, and rear garden that's a real suntrap. Now $197,500.

BEGORRA, A DUPLEX

AS RARE as a green horse to find one of these in Carmel! Each of these modern units has two bedrooms and two baths. You could live in one (or use it as your Carmel weekender), and rent the other. No trouble finding tenants! $265,000.

A BIT OF GREEN

IN THE FORM of lovely old trees and mature plantings surrounds this unusual home south of Ocean Avenue in Carmel. Designed by an architect for himself, it features a big window wall on the east side to trap the morning sun. On the west side, a glimpse of ocean from the dining area and master bedroom. Downstairs, a big studio just begging to be converted! $350,000.

A LEPRECHAUN

WOULD LOVE this spring fresh home, just redecorated and ready for you to move into! It's located south of Ocean Avenue, too, and it's a perfect hideaway, nestled as it is among lovely old oak trees. Two bedrooms, and two up-to-date bathrooms. Attached garage. Shows well. $275,000.

Public Notice

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Planning Director of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, has reviewed the following project and has found that it will have no significant effect upon the environment:

NEGATIVE DECLARATION

PROJECT:

Harrison Memorial Library Annex with public parking and public restrooms. Northwest corner Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue, Block 54; lots 15, 17, and 19.

The Board of Trustees for the Harrison Memorial Library in conjunction with the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea proposed to build a library annex with floor area of 8, 252 square feet and a garage underneath for twenty (20) cars with 7,385 square foot of floor area. Public restrooms for men and women would be located at the garage entrance on Sixth Avenue.

ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT:

An assessment of the project was made on the basis of an environmental questionnaire submitted by Donald Goodhue, architect for the project. The review was made in accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) of 1970 as amended, Division 6, Sections 15000 through 15180, and in accordance with the Municipal Code of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Part X, Division 2, Sections 1323. through 1323.24. The review indicates that the project will have no significant effect on the environment.

REASONS FOR SUPPORTING FINDINGS:

The annex is being located in a built-up area of the community adjacent to the existing library. Consolidation of service will result by moving a portion of the operation from the Sunset Cultural and Community Center. The requirement of low use water fixtures will result in less water being used on this property than the former four dwelling units and an equal decrease in sewer discharge will result. The project will provide more parking on site than required for commercial developments. Space will be provided for parking of twelve (12) more vehicles than is currently provided. City review of the project will assure that the building is in scale and the design is compatible with existing development. The property was specifically purchased for this purpose and the increased parking relieves the primary concern of environmental effect.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that written comments will be received by the Planning Department from March 17, 1983, through March 31, 1983, regarding Environmental Review of this project and that the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will hold a public hearing regarding this matter at 7:30 P.M., Tuesday, April 5, 1983, in the Council Chambers of City Hall, East Side of Monte Verde between Ocean Avenue and Seventh Avenue, at which time a determination will be made regarding this matter.

Dated March 11, 1983.

NOTICE OF DEATH OF Rhoda Sabel
AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE
CASE NO. MP-8195

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate of: RHODA SABEL

A petition has been filed by William Brodsley in the Superior Court of Monterey County requesting that William Brodsley be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act.

A hearing on the petition will be held on Mar. 25, 1983 at 9:30 a.m. located at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, California 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court or present it to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 700 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file a request with the court to receive special notice of the filing of the inventory of estate assets and of the petitions, accounts and reports described in section 1200 and 1200.5 of the California Probate Code.

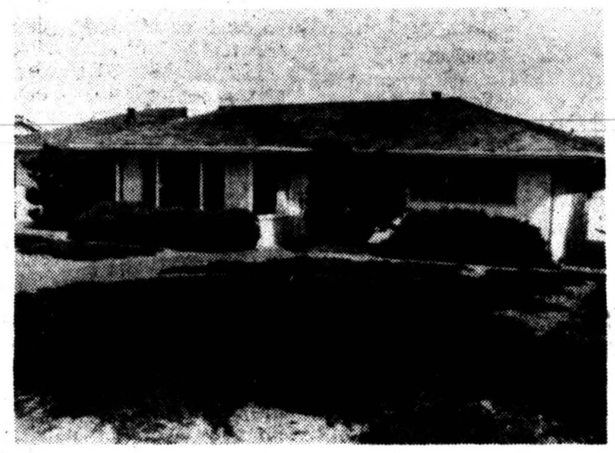
REAL ESTATE

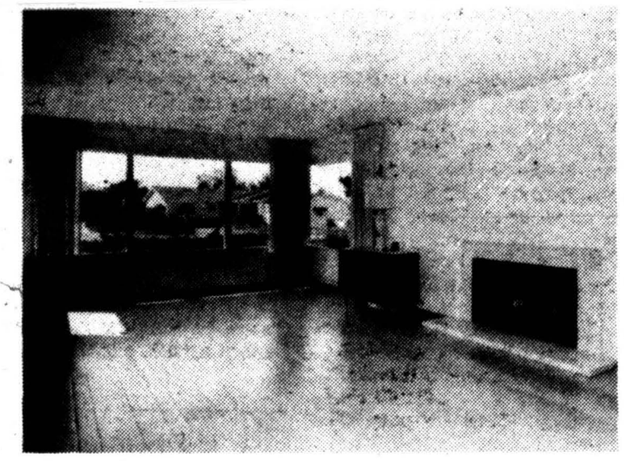
"Space" is the word . . .

Space is the word for this attractive home deep in Carmel Meadows. The lot is wide (70 feet) and level, the house is broad and low with a generous dormer window projecting from its center. All the homes around are on large lots with plenty of play room in between.



The design is simple, pure and functional. On opening the door, one's first impression is of limitless space: a broad view across the Odello artichoke fields, over the rooftops of Carmel, and on to the wooded hills to the north and east of Carmel.

The living room is huge, 27 × 19, with random oak plank floors and great expanses of windows north and south. It works easily as a combination living and dining room. A tile fireplace is on the west, and doors east and west lead to kitchen and sleeping spaces.



The western side is the 21 × 11 kitchen and breakfast room. All appliances are in place, there are many cabinets, tiled work counters and a double sink looking out to the quiet street. The garage is just beyond the kitchen.

On the eastern wind of this L-shaped plan is a long corridor, off which are ranged 3 bedrooms and 2 well equipped baths. The baths are virtual duplicates of each other, in reverse, though one has a large closet and the other a hidden laundry area. The north bedroom has great corner windows, and the other two are well lighted.

From the front windows there's an excellent view of the ocean only a few hundred feet away. A sizeable deck crosses the rear of the house with uninterrupted views of the northern hills. The entire lot has been planted for minimum care: creeping juniper ground cover, sculptured cypress trees across the front, a lovely rose garden and small oaks at the rear.

It's about 3 blocks in on Ribera Road and less than a block from the sea. In beautiful condition, ready for occupancy. $250,000.

Feldenkrais Method introduction

A one-evening introduction to the Feldenkrais Method will be presented from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Friday, March 18, in Room 20 of the Sunset Center in Carmel.

The program will be conducted by Michael Purcell and Kathryn Goldman. Participants should wear warm, comfortable clothing and come prepared for very gentle movement and challenging ideas. The fee is $6. The fee for senior citizens is $3.

A one-day seminar in the Feldenkrais Method will be conducted from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, March 19, in room 20 at Sunset Center in Carmel.

The seminar will be conducted by Michael Purcell and Kathryn Goldman. The Feldenkrais Method, also known as Awareness Through Movement, is useful for the general public, the elderly and the handicapped. It is not a form of exercise but involves a series of effort-reduced movement sequences to improve the use of the body, the nervous system and the self-image.

For registration or more information, phone 624-7381.

Free lecture on acupuncture

A discussion with Dr. Hector A. Prestera, Monterey physician and licensed acupuncturist, will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, March 19 in room number four, the Chapman Room, inside the Marjorie Evans Gallery at the Sunset Center in Carmel.

Is Acupuncture For You? is the title of the discussion and subjects such as arthritis, headaches, sciatica, asthma, allergies, low back pain, muscle spasm, strokes, infertility, rejuvenation and restoration of health, chronic pain, injuries such as tennis elbow and whip-lash are just a few of the topics that will be open for discussion.

Beacon House art auction and dinner

The 24th annual Beacon House art auction and dinner will begin at 5 p.m. with a silent auction on Saturday, March 19 at the Rancho Canada Golf Club on Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley.

The live auction and dinner will begin at 8 p.m. Dinner tickets are $25 for a New York steak.

Proceeds from the auction will benefit Beacon House, the oldest recovery house for alcoholics on the Monterey Peninsula that has functioned without the assistance of federal or state funds. For reservations or more information, phone 373-5295.

Benefit performance at First Theatre

The troupers of the Gold Coast will present a benefit performance for BULBS, Breakers United to Light Breaker Stadium, at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 24, at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific Streets, Monterey.

The play will be Maria Marten, or Murder in the Red Barn. Hors d'oeuvres will be served at 7 p.m., curtain is at 7:45 p.m. There will be no host wine and beer.

BULBS seeks to raise funds to supply lights for Pacific Grove High School's athletic fields. Tickets are $8 per person with all proceeds to benefit BULBS. Tickets may be purchased from coach Hal Nelson at Pacific Grove High School.
